CONSTABULARY FORCE CUT TO PIECES BY PULAJANES

AMERICANS IN FIERCE BATTLE, 14 SLAIN

Lieutenant Worswick and Scout McBride Among Killed, and Town of Bulag Is Threatened by Insurgents---Troops Are Being Rushed to the Rescue.

Special Cable to Boston American.

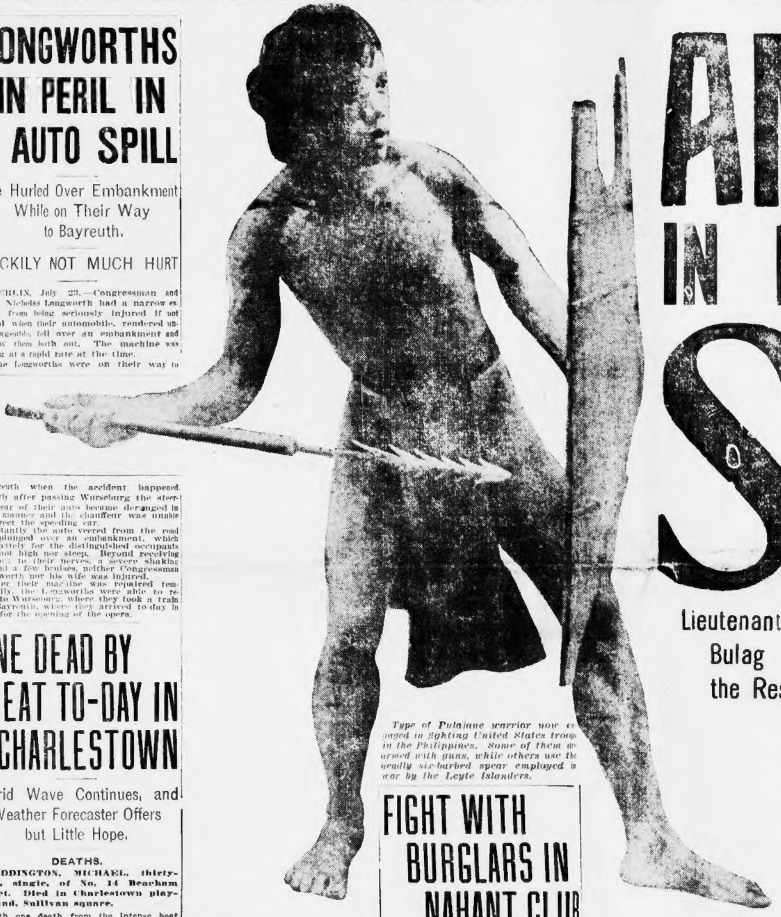
MANILA, July 23.—At 7 o'clock this morning at Bureun, Leyte, Lieutenant Williams and a force of forty-five of the constabulary engaged five hundred Pulajanes in battle. The constabulary were defeated, losing fourteen killed, including Lieutenant James Worswick, Scout McBride and twelve privates.

Fourteen Springfields and two revolvers were captured by the insurgents. The bodies of eleven of the American soldiers were recovered.

Nearly 1,000 Pulajanes are reported in the vicinity moving toward Bulag.

General Leonard Wood has ordered two battalions of infantry to the scene, and promises to send more troops if necessary.

Major Nevill, with fifty of the constabulary force and fifty-five colored troops under command of Captain McMaster, are in pursuit of the Pulajanes, and are expected to strike them to-morrow morning in the vicinity of Lobotabon.



Type of Pulajane warrior now engaged in fighting United States troops in the Philippines. Some of them are armed with guns, while others use the deadly six-barbed spear employed in war by the Leyte Islanders.

LONGWORTHS IN PERIL IN AUTO SPILL

Are Hurled Over Embankment While on Their Way to Bayreuth.

LUCKILY NOT MUCH HURT

BERLIN, July 23.—Congressman and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth had a narrow escape from being seriously injured if not killed when their automobile, rendered unmanageable, fell over an embankment and threw them both out. The machine was going at a rapid rate at the time.

The Longworths were on their way to Bayreuth when the accident happened. Shortly after passing Wurseburg the steering gear of their auto became deranged in some manner and the chauffeur was unable to direct the speeding car.

Instantly the auto veered from the road and plunged over an embankment, which fortunately for the distinguished occupants was not high nor steep. Beyond receiving a shock to their nerves, a severe shaking up and a few bruises, neither Congressman Longworth nor his wife was injured.

After their machine was repaired temporarily, the Longworths were able to return to Wurseburg, where they took a train for Bayreuth, where they arrived to-day in time for the opening of the opera.

ONE DEAD BY HEAT TO-DAY IN CHARLESTOWN

Torrid Wave Continues, and Weather Forecaster Offers but Little Hope.

DEATHS.

REDDINGTON, MICHAEL, thirty-four, single, of No. 14 Beacham street. Died in Charlestown playground, Sullivan square.

With one death from the intense heat reported to the police early to-day, a break in the nine continuous hot days from which Boston has suffered seems far away.

Occasional showers are predicted for to-night, and if they materialize some little temporary relief may be experienced. No permanent or decided change in weather conditions as they have existed here for many days is in sight as yet.

All over the country as far west as the Rocky Mountains the same humid, hot conditions are prevailing, and the forecasters cannot look for anything much different for some days yet.

Should the wind veer around and blow in from the ocean Boston will be cooled off, but the relief will not likely extend far inland and the change would likely be but temporary.

76 at 8 O'Clock in Boston.

With the thermometer registering seventy-six degrees Boston was the hottest spot in New England at 8 o'clock to-day. The coolest spot was Eastport, Me., where the thermometer registered fifty-four.

The hottest spot in the country at the same hour was Key West, 84 degrees; the coolest Mindosa, British Northwest, 52.

Official weather forecast: Occasional showers this evening and slightly cooler temperature. Tuesday fair and slightly cooler.

WITH POWERFUL HUG WOMAN GETS THIEF

The powerful hug of Mrs. Angelina Picardi of Hanover street gave John Pinero, age 19 years, of 21 Charter street, in North End Park last evening saved her $3.49 and landed the young man in the Hanover street station. Mrs. Picardi was drinking from a fountain when she felt a hand on her pocketbook. Quick as a flash she grabbed the hand but the man tore himself free and passed the money to a confederate. Mrs. Picardi with a bound had the second man securely pinioned with his arms at his sides where she held them until an officer took the prisoner away.

QUINCY CLUBHOUSE RAIDED FOR LIQUOR

QUINCY, July 23.—The Puritana Club's Summer home on Bay View avenue was raided last night by the police, who seized and took away with them two half barrels of beer. Eighteen members of the club, including four Boston firemen, were in the cottage at the time. Rudolph F. Watson, lessee, was arrested and his case continued until August 3.

FIGHT WITH BURGLARS IN NAHANT CLUB

Kickapoo Headquarters Is Invaded by Thieves—Member Attacked.

Special to the Boston American.

NAHANT, July 23.—The Summer colony here is astir over the breaking into the Kickapoo Club early to-day by two robbers, one of whom attempted to choke John Fitzgerald of Lynn, a member of the club, who was asleep in the house.

Fitzgerald and four other young men from Lynn were in the clubhouse at the time, and they succeeded in holding the intruder, who assaulted Fitzgerald and robbed him of his watch and some money, until the Nahant police arrived. The man was Frank Rose, alias Bailey, whose picture is in the Massachusetts rogue's gallery, and who has been railroaded out of Boston several times.

His confederate, who was captured by Lynn policeman later, is Thomas McAuliffe. The men were arraigned before Judge Wilson in the Police Court here to-day, and both held for the Grand Jury on charges of breaking, entering and assault.

Fitzgerald and four Lynn friends, George and Charles Pholer, Victor Parent and Frank Hart, have been at the Kickapoo Club for the past few days. They retired shortly before midnight last night. At 1:30 o'clock this morning, Fitzgerald was awakened by someone attempting to choke him. He jumped from his bed and in the encounter with the burglar his head was badly lacerated, necesitating six stitches. The robber had taken his watch and $10 in money.

Fitzgerald's cries aroused the other boys, and while one ran for the police the others fought with the two burglars. McAuliffe got away, but they succeeded in holding Rose.

Chief of Police Larken and Policeman Healey reached the clubhouse in time to catch Rose. He was hustled off to the police station, and the Lynn police were notified that the other man had started in the direction of that place. Policemen Linehan and Merrill were sent out on bicycles, and in front of the Relay House they arrested McAuliffe.

CALLS SIMON DONOVAN BEFORE GRAND JURY

FENWAY CONTRACTOR FAILS TO APPEAR, BUT COUNSEL CONFERS WITH MORAN.

Simon Donovan, contractor and father-in-law of Congressman John A. Sullivan, who was engaged in a portion of the Fenway job, charges of graft in which are under investigation by District-Attorney Moran, was served with summons to-day to appear before the Grand Jury and bring his books.

Mr. Donovan did not appear. In his place came his attorney, former Corporation Counsel Andrew J. Bailey, who had a conference with Mr. Moran.

Excused Until Wednesday.

Mr. Bailey told the District Attorney that he intended to apply to the Supreme Court for a writ of prohibition to prevent the examination of Mr. Donovan by the grand jury. He asked that Mr. Moran excuse his client until Wednesday to give the attorney time to prepare the papers. To this Mr. Moran assented.

The session of the Grand Jury which begins to-day, is a special one and will handle no routine cases. It will have to do with the important cases which have been under investigation by the District Attorney.

Six new members who were drawn by the Board of Aldermen to take the places of those who failed to appear at the last session were on hand to-day and were sworn in.

The new members are James R. Armstrong, retired, No. 8 Grant avenue, Ward 25; Daniel J. Donahue, tailor, No. 158 Shawmut avenue, Ward 9; James Driscoll, mason, No. 2 Sherman square, Ward 4; Charles Duckering, clerk, No. 2 Warner street, Ward 20; Dennis Cantwell, salesman, No. 622 East Third street, Ward 14; Martin H. SEEK MYSTERIOUS AUTO FOR CLUE TO LOST GIRL

MACHINE WITH 3 MEN SEEN NEAR UPPER POND ON DAY WINZOLA GOODELL DISAPPEARED.

Special to the Boston American.

Belchertown, July 23.—To determine the identity of three occupants of a mysterious auto, all of them young men looking like students, who were seen between Upper Pond and Amherst on July 6, State Detective Alfred B. Hodges and High Sheriff J. E. Clark, who are trying to solve the strange disappearance of Winzola M. Goodell, to-day began work on an entirely new clue.

Charles Marsh, a farmer who lives about two miles from Upper Pond in the direction of Amherst, says that on July 6, the day Miss Goodell disappeared he saw a strange automobile pass his home, going toward the pond. Marsh says:

"It was about 3 or 4 o'clock in the afternoon when I saw the automobile pass my house. As I have poor eyesight I could not determine the number, but the machine was very dark in color. In it were three young men who looked like students."

Early to-day State Detective Hodges, with Deputy Sheriff Myron S. Barton, Postmaster F. D. Walker and Constable L. W. Dillon, went to Upper Pond and began to drag it thoroughly with new appliances. Detective Hodges says he is not satisfied that the work has been thoroughly done, despite the dynamiting and dragging.

Mystery Deep as Ever.

Hodges says that next to the investigation of the mysterious auto seen by Farmer Marsh is the investigation into the ownership and the occupants of the carriage which was seen in the grove near the pond. He is working on this now, but the mystery seems no nearer solution now than it did one week ago.

Systematic search was made of the woods on the east side of Upper Pond yesterday, 1,000 men and boys from all over Hampshire County taking part. Despite the extreme heat, the searchers tramped all over the mountain, but found nothing. It was at the foot of this mountain that the piece of baby ribbon of the kind worn by the missing girl was found. Five hundred acres of densely wooded land were searched.

The searching party was in charge of Deputy Sheriff Myron S. Barton and James Peeso of Belchertown. They were assisted by the following deputy sheriffs: Representative Josiah W. Flint, Enfield; George F. Crittendon, Northampton; F. W. Brockway, South Hadley; Reuben Bell, Hadley; E. T. Hervey, Northampton; ex-Senator M. A. Morse, Belchertown; T. A. Orcutt, Northampton, and David H. Tillson, Amherst. Over 200 carriage and automobile parties visited the pond for which Miss Goodell was bound when she left home.

No Trace of Body.

After the unsuccessful search, thirty-five pounds of dynamite were sunk to the bottom of the pond and exploded, killing thousands of fish, but the girl's body did not rise. Wesley M. Goodell, the father of the girl, rose at 4 in the morning and dragged the pond for eight hours.

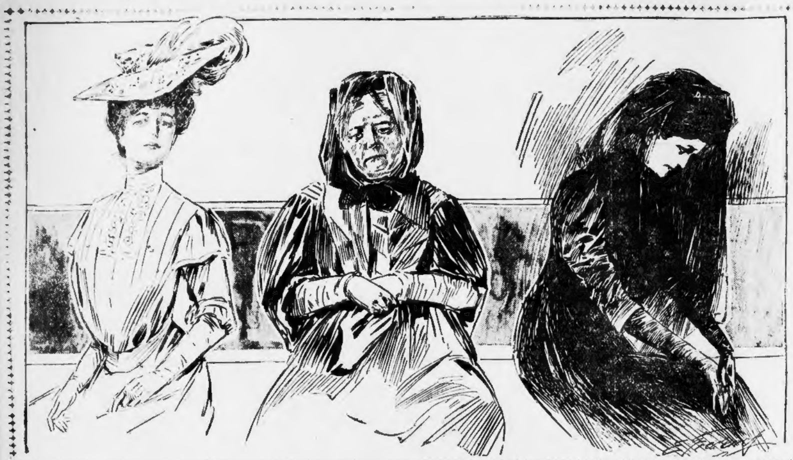
EVELYN NESBIT'S MOTHER FOUGHT HER MARRIAGE TO HARRY K. THAW



Mrs. E. J. Holman, mother of Mrs. Evelyn Nesbit Thaw.

Mrs. William Thaw, mother of Harry Kendall Thaw.

Mrs. Stanford White, widow of Stanford White.

SKETCHES BY FREDERICK OF THREE WOMEN VITALLY CONCERNED IN THAW-WHITE TRAGEDY.

Letters to Architect Show That Mrs. Holman Sought White's Aid in Breaking Up Match.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Letters written by Mrs. Holman, mother of Mrs. Harry K. Thaw, and also by her husband, found among the effects of Stanford White, all showing that the mother bitterly opposed the marriage of her daughter and Thaw, will probably play an important part in the trial of Harry Thaw for White's murder. They show that White had not only befriended Evelyn Nesbit, but also her mother, her brother and even her stepfather. All the troubles of the family appear to have been laid before the man murdered by Thaw.

Perhaps the most significant of the letters, and one that will occupy a conspicuous place in the Thaw trial exhibits, although only part of it remains, contains the following important quotation:

"I have expected a letter from you every day, and, tell me, is there any hope of getting her away from Thaw?"

The rest of the letters which have been made public reveal many things that have not hitherto been known about Stanford White and his relations with Evelyn Nesbit and her family.

Was Unhappy with Thaw.

Among the earliest letters is one in which Mrs. Holman tells White of their unhappy time with Thaw.

Dear Mr. White:

Your letter received. Will send Florence's letter as you desired. When we first went to Paris and met Thaw, he and Florence quarrelled continually. We were—at least I was—indeed miserable. I expected each day to hear her say we would return to America. Thaw came to me, asked me to sign a paper. The article was that he did not intend to marry Florence. I thought as she hated him so I was doing the right thing. I do hope something can be done to save her from him. He does not intend to marry her. I would rather see her dead. I only hope when she hears about the paper that her pride will at least save her. Yours truly, E. F. NESBIT.

Thought Evelyn Was Inhuman.

Mrs. Nesbit once considered her daughter "inhuman."

Dear Mr. White:

Howard wrote Florence that the doctor here prescribed an electric battery at once for my arms. She was so inhuman as to answer that she would do nothing until I gave the order for the furniture. All I wanted when I went to you was to save it from Thaw, as I was told he intended to destroy it. I hope to be able to come and get what few things I possess, as I suppose she would throw away my belongings.

I will send to you her most inhuman letter. She should be told my lost health is due to her brutal treatment. Very sincerely,

E. F. NESBIT.

Wanted to Punish Thaw.

There was a party, and Stanford White by the following evidently supplied it with flowers and dainties.

Dear Mr. White:

The flowers and candy came just in time for the party, and Howard was delighted. We both thank you very much. I hear Florence has left New York. Do you know where she has gone? I do wish you would let me punish that Thaw. I do not think it right he should be allowed to have control of her. He does not allow her to write to Howard or me. Howard has written her many times. She never answers any of his letters. She is most ungrateful. Please do tell me what to do. I received the postoffice order and thank you very much. I hope you are well and that I may hear from you very soon. Very truly, E. F. NESBIT.

Took Their Lies to Her Best Friends.

Mrs. Nesbit's other domestic troubles were also laid before White.

Dear Mr. White:

I just received a letter from Mr. Holman. He tells me Florence is in Pittsburg with Thaw, and her reason for going to Pittsburg was to see a lawyer about what I said about Mr. Nesbit in Paris. While in Paris Thaw hated me because I would not allow him to speak ill of you. He said it was indeed a pity I had not died instead of Mr. Nesbit, as I was not fit to be her mother. It made me furious, and I answered back that had her father lived he would have been in jail, as he had used so much money of the loan association that he was the attorney for. Now Mr. White, Thaw is doing all this against me because he knows he is guilty of murderous treatment of me while I was abroad. Mr. White, it is not right for me to stay away here and let him do as he is doing and me keep quiet. If he is not guilty why should he try to do so much against me? Please do answer and tell me what to do. I am almost crazy, as she and Thaw have gone to Gills, my best friends, with their lies. Good-by. Please to answer. Very sincerely, E. F. NESBIT.

This letter may have annoyed White, for the next letter seems an apology.

Dear Mr. White:

As soon as your first telegram came I answered it. I am very sorry if you have been annoyed. I hope you get what you want from the storage. Very truly. soon. Very truly,

E. F. NESBIT.

Tortured With Publicity of Case.

Mrs. Nesbit marries Holman, but even that does not keep her from asking aid of White when her daughter is considered.

Dear Mr. White:

The morning papers say Florence is in New York. If the coward won't say she is honorably his wife, please try to get her to see you and talk sense to her and have her understand the awful light he has placed her in before the world.

I am simply tortured with reporters. My head has simply been splitting for a week. You have no idea how disgraceful this affair is to the Pittsburg people. They drive me wild telling me to take action, that she is not of age.

Mr. White, please do try to talk to her. She is too young to understand how she is being wronged. I hope I hear from you very soon. Very truly, E. F. HOLMAN.

Bothered to Death by Reporters.

The next letter, dated November 2, 1904, reads:

Dear Mr. White:

Of course you are aware of Florence's arrival in New York, also the trouble they had at the Cumberland Hotel, in New York where they were staying first. Where they are now we do not know. We have been bothered to death by reporters to-day, but have said nothing. One asked me if I had anything to say, and my answer was, all I know and we know is what we have read in the papers. I also just read a telegram from Florence, and this is the contents: "Arrived safely—don't mind newspapers—will write."

We have said nothing, as I said before, and shall not until we get something definite to work on. Up to the present writing we have had nothing but newspaper comments, and shall await for something definite and then will act. We keep you posted, as we know you are more or less interested in this affair, as well as the girl's interests.

We might add, we do not look for you to do anything that will compromise you in any way, and fully appreciate your kindness of the past as well as present. Very truly. E. J. HOLMAN.

Tried to Learn About Marriage Rumor.

In October, 1904, Mrs. Holman was evidently very anxious to find out whether there was any truth in the report that her daughter and Harry Thaw had been married when abroad. She again wrote to Mr. White, saying:

The Pittsburg papers are full of reports concerning Thaw and Florence being married. Do you think the report from London is true? Can you in any way find the real facts? We have been most annoyed by reporters in Pittsburg, also one sent from New York by the Journal and a telegram from the World editor to-night. We declined to talk to any. We know nothing. Please reply as soon as possible.

Nothing More Than Thaw's Fool.

Then follows another letter, as follows:

Dear Mr. White:

Thanks for the letter and clipping. I beg of you, try find some one to talk to the poor girl. Oh, the awful position he has placed her in before the world! She would rather die than receive any favor from him after this. He has given the world to understand she is nothing more than his fool. I am almost crazy. I have talked to no one, and have not spoken to a reporter, although they have me dying. It makes me ill to see Mr. Holman have to hang his head for such a villain. I hope I hear from you very soon. Very sincerely,

E. HOLMAN.

Worried at Thaw's Treatment of Daughter.

Again it appears that Mrs. Holman was trying to find out whether a marriage ceremony had been performed while her daughter was travelling on the Continent with Thaw. She addressed the following letter:

Dear Mr. White:

I received your first letter just after I mailed one to you. Do you think Mr. Wadsworth could find any truth? I am indeed sorry if she has married him, but if after all this newspaper talk she is not married it will be awful. Holman smiled at the questions put to him. Now the papers say he acknowledged the truth of the reports. I am dreadfully worried and am afraid it will all end shabbily for her, as he is such a villain. If you hear anything won't you please let me know?

Very sincerely, E. HOLMAN, 403 Oakland.

CONFERENCE FAILS; TROLLEY STRIKE NEAR

VAIN EFFORT FOR NEW BEDFORD AGREEMENT—700 MEN READY TO QUIT.

Special to the Boston American.

NEW BEDFORD, July 23.—The trolley strike is imminent. The conference between the men and the management in Mayor Thomas Thompson's office, which began at 10 o'clock, broke up abruptly at 11:30. President Crapo of the local roads refused to grant the desired increase in wages or to sign any agreement recognizing the newly-formed local union. Seven hundred men are prepared to go out at once.

After the conference dissolved Mayor Thompson said:

"I fear a strike is inevitable."

While the Mayor is not authorized to speak for the employes, his word is taken as sufficient.

Organizer Fitzgerald, representing the Amalgamated Association of Street Railway Employes, said before the conference: "If President Crapo will not recognize the union there will be a strike immediately."

Two Mayors in Conference.

After the conference Fitzgerald refused to talk until he had communicated with National President D. W. Mahone, who is in Detroit. Fitzgerald hurried to the nearest telegraph office to wire Mahone of the failure of the conference, and to get authority to call out the men.

The men look forward to the strike being called at any time. It was expected that it would be ordered by 1:30 or by 2 o'clock at the latest.

News of the failure of the conference spread throughout the city rapidly and caused much disappointment. President Crapo is being criticized for refusing to recognize the union.

The conference was attended by Mayor Thompson of this city, Mayor John T. Coughlin of Fall River, who is president of the Fall River Trolleymen's local union; by Organizer Fitzgerald and by President William Cleary and a delegation of nine other members of the newly formed local union.

Men Demand More Pay.

The main points at issue were recognition of the union and more pay. The men now get a sliding scale of from twenty-one cents an hour to twenty-five cents. They have to work sixteen years for the company before they get the twenty-five-cent rate. The men asked a flat rate of twenty-five cents, to take effect as soon as a man was hired.

They did not demand that none but union men be employed, but they did demand that the union be recognized. Organizer Fitzgerald insisted on this. President Crapo had intimated that he would not treat with the union in any way.

Then, as a last resort, this conference between the Mayors, the men and the management was arranged. It was feared at first that Crapo would not attend. But he came. It was seen right off, however, when he practically ignored Organizer Fitzgerald's greeting, that he would not consider the union officially or any organizer. He was pleasant enough to his own men, though.

The fears of a failure were justified, however, and the strike cannot be averted, so far as it seems now.

The union men say that they can tie up the roads. Crapo says they can't. The roads have had new men, in anticipation of a strike. The union men say that many of these newcomers are already on the union side, if not actually members.

Big Territory Affected.

A tie-up would cause vast inconvenience to a large and thickly populated territory. President Crapo is president of the Union Street Railway Company, which is the local city line, of the Dartmouth & Westport Road, which is the big double-track line to Fall River, and of the New Bedford & Onset Road. He also controls the Middleboro & Buzzard's Bay line.

There are 700 union employes.

The territory covered by the roads includes Middleboro, Onset, Monument Beach, Marion, Wharehum, Mattepoisett, Fairhaven, Fall River, New Bedford and Westport. There is a considerable permanent population which is greatly increased in the Summer.

There is in Summer especialy a very heavy traffic, both long and short haul. A tie-up would leave without trolley transportation a large section of the South Shore district which has developed through trolley expansion more than by anything else.

BIG ATHLETIC CARNIVAL FOR QUAKE ORPHANS

Mothers and Daughters' Committee Join in Effort to Aid Homeless at Frisco.

By Boston American Leased Wire.

NEW YORK, July 23.—What gives every promise of being the greatest event in the field of amateur sport ever witnessed in this country will be the great athletic carnival to be held on Saturday, August 4, at American League Baseball Park, this city. The entire proceeds will be turned over to the fund for the building of a non-sectarian orphan asylum in San Francisco and the carnival will be held under the auspices of the National Mothers and Daughters' committee which has undertaken the work of caring for the unfortunate little ones of the Golden Gate, in which work they have been greatly aided by the New York American.

Officials and Laymen Assist.

The mothers and daughters' committee is composed of the wives and daughters of Governors, Mayors of many cities, United States Senators, United States Judges, officers of the Army and Navy, social leaders, Congressmen and other prominent people all over the land. The athletic carnival is being arranged by a games committee headed by James E. Sullivan, secretary-treasurer of the Amateur Athletic League of America, and has the sanction of that organization.

Army and Navy Athletes.

Mr. Sullivan is known in the field of sport all over the world and the committee is made up of well-known athletic leaders. Entries are pouring in from all over the country, and the greatest enthusiasm is manifested in the meet. Among the world famous athletes who will compete will be many of the famous American teams who won victory against the athletes of the world in the recent Olympic games at Athens, Greece.

Any athlete who complies with the rules of the A. A. A. U. is privileged to compete. Teams are expected from the army and navy and from West Point and Annapolis. Entries close on July 28 with James E. Sullivan, 21 Warren street, this city. Handsome prizes will be awarded the first, second and third in each event, and in addition a beautiful souvenir medal will be presented to every athlete who competes by Mr. William R. Hearst. One result of the carnival may be that a similar event may be arranged every year, when amateurs of the world may compete, on the lines of the tournament recently held at Athens, Greece.

STEAL MILE OF WIRE FROM POLES

SAUGUS, July 23.—Thieves, who are evidently expert linemen, robbed the electric light company of nearly 4,000 feet of copper wire from the poles on Broadway, and incidentally the people in the vicinity of light, in a manner so consummate that the investigations of the police have revealed nothing thus far. Not an insulator or cross beam was broken by the perpetrators, which bears out the fact that they were familiar with the work.

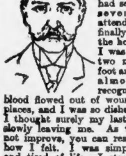
TIRED OF LIFE AWFUL SUFFERING

From Dreadful Pains From Wound on Foot—System All Run Down After Six Months' Agony—Not Able to Work—Completely Cured In Two Weeks

MIRACULOUS CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES



"Words cannot speak highly enough for the Cuticura Remedies. I am now seventy-two years of age. My system had been all run down. My blood was so bad that blood poisoning had set in. I had several doctors attending me, so finally I went to the hospital, where I was laid up for two months. My foot and ankle were almost beyond recognition. Dark blood flowed out of wounds in many places, and I was so disheartened that I thought surely my last chance was slowly leaving me. As the foot did not improve, you can readily imagine how I felt. I was simply disgusted and tired of life. I stood this pain, which was dreadful, for six months, and during this time I was not able to wear a shoe and not able to work.

"Some one spoke to me about Cuticura. The consequences were I bought a set of the Cuticura Remedies of one of my friends who was a druggist, and the praise that I gave after the second application is beyond description; it seemed a miracle, for the Cuticura Remedies took effect immediately. I washed the foot with the Cuticura Soap before applying the Ointment and I took the Resolvent at the same time. After two weeks' treatment my foot was healed completely. People who had seen my foot during my illness and who have seen it since the cure, can hardly believe their own eyes."

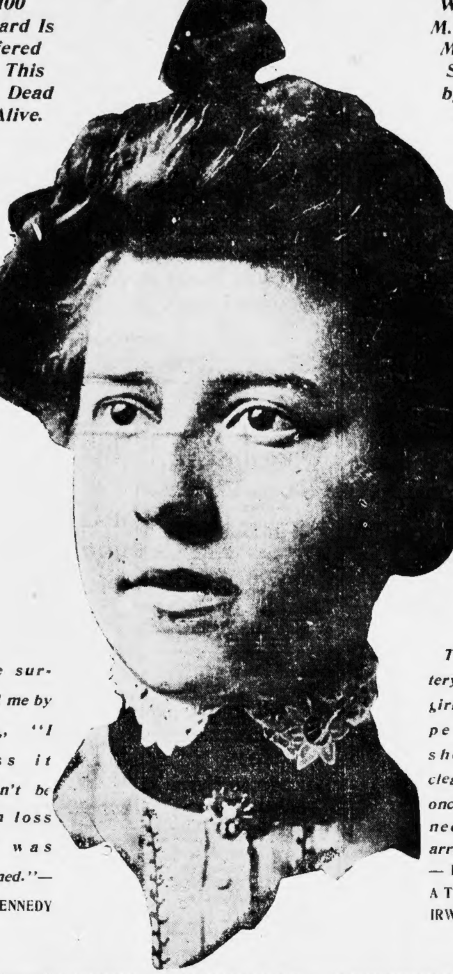
FATHER WAITS FOR SPIRIT MESSAGE FROM MISSING GIRL

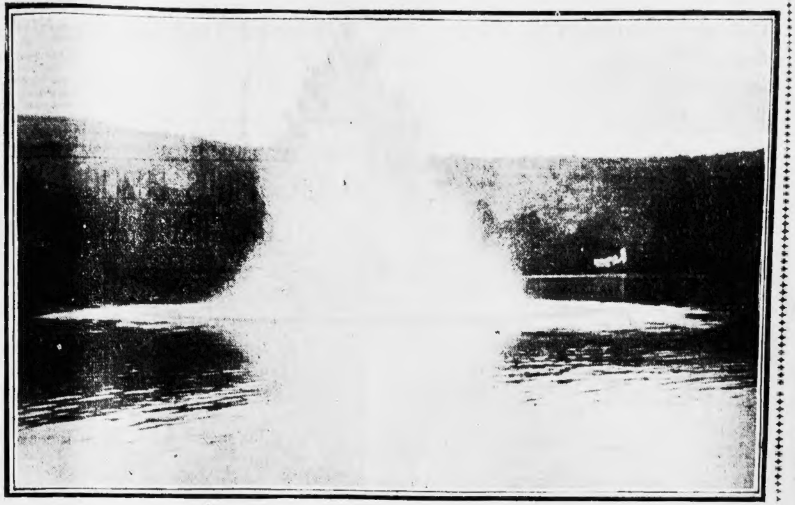
$100 Reward Is Offered for This Girl, Dead or Alive.

Winzola M. Goodell, Missing, Sought by 1,000 Men.



She surprised me by saying, "I guess it wouldn't be much loss if I was Drowned."—WM. KENNEDY

The mystery of this girl's disappearance should be cleared up at once and, if necessary, arrests made.—DISTRICT ATTORNEY IRWIN.



DYNAMITING POND IN EFFORT TO BRING TO THE SURFACE THE BODY OF MISS WINZOLA GOODELL.

His Faith Tells Him to Hope for Word from Beyond the Veil—Does Not Believe Girl Eloped, Killed Herself or Was Murdered, But Was Accidentally Drowned.

Father Sure Girl's Body Is in Pond

"IT is just as I expected. My girl's body is in that pond. I am sure of it."—Statement by Wesley M. Goodell, father of the missing girl, after yesterday's futile search.

BELCHERTOWN, July 23.—Believing that his daughter was accidentally drowned, and not slain or a suicide, Wesly Goodell, father of Winzola Goodell, is waiting for a message from her from the spirit world. Mr. Goodell is a Spiritualist and firmly believes that his daughter's spirit will communicate with him. He said to-day to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter:

"The loss of my daughter Winnie is a great blow to us. My wife is almost prostrated. She is now confined to her bed because of the terrible calamity that has befallen us. Winnie was our eldest child and this makes it all the more hard. She was a sweet, lovable girl and liked by everyone who knew her.

"The only thing that consoles me in this dark hour is the fact that to a certain extent I believe in Spiritualism. While I am not a full fledged Spiritualist, there are many things in it which I believe in. I believe that a good Christian goes to some other earth as he came to this one. I believe in the transmigration of souls. No man ever dies.

"Winnie is the first child I have lost. If she has been slain or if her body is at the bottom of that pond she is dead only physically. Her soul still lives, and that fact comforts me in my great grief. As yet she has not communicated with me in a spirit way, but I am in hopes she will provided she has passed the confines of this earth.

NO REASON FOR SUICIDE.

"There was no reason why my daughter should commit suicide, and I do not believe she has done away with herself. In my opinion she is the victim of accidental drowning. I do not think she was murdered. I am confident her body will be found on the bottom of Upper Pond.

"There is no doubt in my mind that she fell overboard from the skiff Edna while changing seats. It is true that the oars were found in the boat dry, as though unused. In all probability she used a paddle which was found in the boat. The paddle was wet.

"The boat in which she is supposed to have gone out for a row is a very dangerous one. It is a small, flat-bottomed affair and very treacherous. It would be an easy matter for her to have fallen out without the boat upsetting.

"There are many holes in the pond from fifty to seventy feet deep, and no amount of dragging will dislodge the body. Even dynamite, which they have resorted to, will not do any good. I believe the body will rise to the surface in two or three weeks. There are many springs in the pond and, the water being ice cold, will tend to keep the body from rising to the surface in the regular time.

DISCREDITS ELOPEMENT.

"I do not think Winnie has run away from home or eloped with anyone. She left home July 6 shortly after 4 in the afternoon, saying she was going to the pond for a row. She was dressed simply, wore no corsets and no hat. She wore low shoes. Had she intended to run away from home or intended to elope with any one she would not have gone away in such clothes.

"Furthermore, she had no money. She was in a happy frame of mind when leaving. I am not positive that she was on the pond that afternoon. The comb found in the bottom of the boat was hers. That's the only thing which we can count on.

"The bit of ribbon which was found near the railroad track half a mile from where the boat was found is undoubtedly of the same material that Winnie wore in her underclothing.

"Yes, it is true that she was friendly with Frank Bartlett, but I don't believe he figures in the case at all. Some of my friends have advanced the theory that she became mentally unbalanced because of a sweetheart quarrel with him. I have no reason to believe this is so.

"WAS NO LOVERS' TIFF."

"Frank was here a few days before she disappeared. He visited her twice at the house and stayed at our home one night because of missing a train. Winnie liked Frank very much. They went to school together in the same grade and were in each other's company nearly all the time.

"On the day he left for Virginia she rode as far as Amherst with him and kissed him good-by before leaving the train. This explodes the theory that she worried herself sick as the result of a lovers' tiff. Winnie was in excellent health, and I am sure is not wandering about as some believe.

"Just before she left the house on the fateful day she remarked that she had just written a letter to Frank. At first I thought this letter might throw some light on her disappearance, so wrote to Mr. Bartlett, making inquiries. He wrote back that he was shocked at her disappearance and could offer no explanation."

FLORENCE JEWETT GIVES NEW CLUE

Special to the Boston American.

BELCHERTOWN, July 23.—There are many people in Belchertown who still believe that Miss Goodell did not reach the pond for which she started. They believe that she was accosted on the road between the home of Lyman Randolph and the pond by a man who enticed her to go into the woods with him and that she was murdered there.

The road between the Randolph home and the pond is very narrow and winding. Deep woods line both sides. This section has not been searched and many who have kept in touch with the case from the beginning say if this locality was carefully gone over the body would be found and the mystery partly cleared.

The last person, so far as known, who saw Miss Goodell alive is William Randolph. He lives half way between the missing girl's home and the pond. He was at work in a field near the road. He says after Miss Goodell passed she turned about several times and looked all around. He says that she appeared to him to be either looking for some one or making observations to ascertain if any one was watching her.

SAW MISS GOODELL ON ROAD.

An important witness has been discovered in the person of pretty nineteen-year-old Florence Jewett of West Pelham. State Detective Hodges places considerable weight on her story. According to Miss Jewett, it would have been impossible for Miss Goodell to have reached the pond.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Miss Jewett said: "On July 6, the day Winnie disappeared, I was out driving with my uncle, Charles R. Allison of New York, and his thirteen-year-old son, Harold. We arrived at Dwight postoffice at 4:35 and went in for the purpose of buying some tonic. The postoffice is in a small store run by Miss Goodell's father. While in the store Winnie came from her home in the rear and posted a letter in the office.

"I know Winnie well, having met her many times.

"They didn't have any tonic at the postoffice, so we drove along a few hundred feet to the store of William Kennedy. After that we drove back to Dwight station, where Mr. William Brendlyn of New York, a friend of Mr. Allison's, was to take the 4:40 train to Mt. Tom Junction. Mr. Brendlyn had been up to Middle pond to go fishing with my uncle but missed him. Mr. Brendlyn has side whiskers and judging from the description in the papers he is the mysterious man who was seen by Henry Thrasher and two other boys while they were fishing on Middle pond that day.

GIRL DIDN'T HAVE TIME.

"While driving to the station to see Mr. Brendlyn off I saw Winnie Goodell leave the postoffice and walk down the road toward the pond.

"That was about 4:38, two minutes before the train left.

"After the train left we drove to Middle pond. Winnie had only ten minutes start of us, but we did not overtake her, although the Upper pond is twenty-five minutes' walk. I expected to meet her on the road, but when I did not, I concluded she had stepped into Mr. Randolph's home, which is about half way to the pond.

"When we passed the Schillare cottage on the shores of Upper Pond," said Miss Florence Jewett to a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter, "I saw a black buggy in the pine grove. It was a very finely upholstered rig and brand new. It was a high-backed affair, and must have cost a big sum.

"I do not believe Winnie reached the pond. She did not have time to get there on foot before we arrived by carriage. Our horse trotted most of the way.

"I think Winnie was met by some man on the road between Mr. Randolph's house and the pond and lured into the woods. She could not have reached the pond, that is certain. If she has been killed I think her body will be found in the woods just beyond Mr. Randolph's house on the way to Belchertown."

URGE REPUBLIC FOR THE JEWS

Declaring that the only hope for oppressed Hebrews is in the establishing of a Jewish republic in Palestine, the Zionists of Boston to-day are discussing the practical results of the meeting which was held in Faneuil Hall Sunday, when resolutions were adopted, pledging loyal support to the Zionist movement as carried on by the late Dr. Theodore Herzl.

The meeting was in the nature of a memorial to Dr. Herzl, the founder of the Zionist movement. The speakers were J. Elenner, Alderman E. J. Bromberg, Dr. J. Freedman of Columbia University, Rabbi M. M. Eichler, Julius Meyer and Jacob de Haas. H. M. Kallen, formerly a professor at Princeton and now a fellow at Harvard, presided.

RUSSELL SAGE WORLD'S RICHEST MONEY LENDER DEAD

Eccentric Wall Street Financier Leaves $100,000,000

At 90 Years of Age the Man Who Always Had Millions to Lend Dies at His Country Home.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Russell Sage, a hundred times a millionaire, the greatest money lender in the world, who had more real hard cash of his own he could put his hands on at short notice than any other man in the United States, is dead. The end came yesterday at his country home at "Cedarcroft," at Lawrence, L. I., and the immediate cause was a complication of diseases incident to old age. He lacked just thirteen days of being ninety years old.

His end was peaceful. He had been failing steadily for several months and for the last few weeks had been practically confined to his home. His death had been expected since Friday night, when a sinking spell set in and the end was only averted by the administering of oxygen by Dr. Edward Janeway and his son, Dr. Theodore C. Janeway. From this sinking spell he never rallied. All during Saturday his condition was critical, with occasional moments of unconsciousness. Yesterday morning he cheered up considerably. He called Mrs. Sage into the room shortly after noon and pointed out a full-rigged ship with all sails set. The two talked for a short time and Mr. Sage was in the best of humor. He did not realize that he was a very sick man and the doctors had not attempted to impress on him the fact that the end was near.

Unconscious to End.

About 12:30 he grew faint and sank back in bed. In a twinkling he was unconscious. Dr. J. Carl Schmuck, the local physician attending Mr. Sage, saw the condition of the patient and sent a call to this city for Dr. Theodore Janeway. The latter made for Lawrence as fast as his auto could travel. He reached the house some time before Mr. Sage expired at 4:30 o'clock, without regaining consciousness or uttering any farewell words.

At the deathbed were Mrs. Sage, her brother, Colonel J. J. Slocum; Dr. J. Carl Schmuck, Dr. Theodore S. Janeway and the Rev. Robert Leetch.

It is announced the funeral will be held at the First Presbyterian Church, Far Rockaway, on Tuesday afternoon. The interment will take place at Troy, N. Y., on Wednesday.

Mr. Sage attained his high financial position entirely by his own exertions, and in spite of his advanced age continued in harness until very recently. He was always a person of good habits and explained his vigor in advanced life by saying that he had always kept early hours, used no tobacco and never took stimulants except in a most temperate manner.

Began as Poor Boy.

Starting as a poor boy, he was a millionaire in the early 60s, when fortunes of that size were rare in America, and since then by careful turning over of his money he made it increase like a snowball rolled down hill. He varied money-getting by going into politics in the 50's, and served two terms in Congress in 1852 and 1854 as a Whig. Politics ceased to have charms for him, however, and he took no active interest in it after his second term.

Russell Sage was born in Verona, Oneida County, New York, August 4, 1816. He spent his early boyhood on his father's farm, and at the age of twelve became an errand boy in the grocery store of his brother, Henry Risley Sage, in Troy, N. Y. When twenty-one he became the partner of another brother, Elisha Montague Sage, in a retail grocery store, of which he soon became sole proprietor. The business became a wholesale concern in 1839, with John W. Bates as partner.

Entered Wall Street in 1863.

Mr. Sage gave up his business in 1857, the year of the great panic, and with a capital of about $750,000, devoted himself to financial operations. In the early days of the Civil War he began to operate in Wall Street, and in 1863 he removed to New York. He bought a seat in the stock exchange in 1874.

The most dramatic event in his life was the Norcross incident in December, 1891, when a man of unbalanced mind demanded an immediate gift of a large sum of money from Mr. Sage in his office, 71 Broadway. When the offer was refused the man dropped a dynamite bomb upon the floor, the explosion of which blew the man to atoms, killed one of the clerks and wrecked the office. Mr. Sage was severely injured, and his recovery was due, his physicians said, to his vigorous constitution.

Warned Against Trusts.

He uttered a warning to the business world in the midst of the great coal strike of 1902 in the following words:

"Combinations of all great industries are a menace to the government. Such combinations are not only a menace, but are the oppressors of the people. Should an era of combinations ensue the American people will certainly revolt against them, and if they do there will be financial ruin such as people have never dreamed of in the history of the world."

Russell Sage was married twice. His first wife was a Miss Winne of Troy, to whom he was wedded in 1841. She died in 1867. Two years later Mr. Sage married Miss Olivia Slocum of Syracuse, a schoolmate of his first wife at the Emma Willard Seminary in Troy.

SOME OF RUSSELL SAGE'S PITHY MAXIMS ON LIFE

The tender care of a good wife is the finest thing in the world.

When you have made your fortune it is time enough to think about spending it.

A boy who knows bargains in socks makes a man who knows bargains in stocks.

There is no such thing as a money curse. A good man cannot have too much money.

The longer a man lives the more mistakes he may be counted upon to make.

Clubs are only a place for idle men and wasteful young men.

An active man builds success upon a foundation of failure; passive man does not.

Real charity is dispensed without the glare of trumpets.

Two suits of clothes are enough for a young man.

A serge suit and a linen suit are enough for Summer and should last two seasons. Seven dollars is plenty to pay for the serge, and you can get a fine, cool linen suit for $3.50 to $4.

Fifty cents is enough to pay for a straw hat, and then it should last two seasons. These extra fancy hat bands are just so much waste.—From epigrammatic sayings of Russell Sage.

LABOR PROCLAIMS POLITICAL PROGRAMME

Executive Council of the Federation Issues Call for Workingmen to Assert Their Rights by the Ballot.

WASHINGTON, July 23.—The American Federation of Labor made public to-day its campaign program, which outlines the position that organized labor will take regarding the congressional elections this Fall.

Vigorous and concerted efforts will be made to elect to the national house of Representatives and State Legislatures only such men as favor propositions advocated by the workingmen.

A Labor Representation Committee will have its headquarters here and conduct the campaign for organized labor. It comprises Samuel Gompers, James O'Connell and Frank Morrison. Reports will be made to this committee.

The blacklist of the American Federation, which contains the names of Speaker Cannon, Congressman Littlefield and many other members of the House who have incurred the enmity of organized labor by opposing the new eight-hour bill and anti-injunction legislation, has not been made public. It has been prepared with great care and contains reference to each public man who has antagonized the interests of workingmen.

The programme is contained in the following proclamation of the executive council of the A. F. of L.:

"To All Organized Labor and Friends in the United States:

"Dear Sirs and Brothers: Events in the industrial affairs of our people have rapidly changed and are rapidly changing. The trade union movement, as expressed by the American Federation of Labor, has kept and proposes to keep pace therewith.

Progress Is Welcomed.

"The wheel of industry cannot be halted or turned back, nor should they be, even if that were possible. Welcoming industrial progress, labor must be ever alert to meet new conditions, recognizing that eternal vigilance is the price of industrial as well as political liberty.

"The working people cannot hope to maintain their right or a progressive position in the varying phases of modern society unless they organize and exercise all those functions which, as workmen and citizens, it is their privilege and their duty to exercise.

"Labor makes no demand upon government or society which is not equally accorded to all the people of our country. It can and will be satisfied with nothing less.

"The position of organized labor upon the question of political action by the working class, their friends and sympathizers, has often been declared, but was more clearly set forth in the following declaration, unanimously adopted by the Nashville convention of the American Federation of Labor in 1897 and often reaffirmed since:

"'Resolved: That the American Federation of Labor most firmly and unequivocally favors the independent use of the ballot by the trade unionists and workmen, united regardless of party, that we may elect men from our own ranks to make new laws and administer them along the line laid down in the legislative demands of the American Federation of Labor and at the same time secure an impartial judiciary that will not govern us by arbitrary injunctions of the courts, nor act as the pliant tools of corporate wealth.

No Political Servitude.

"'Resolved: That, as our efforts are centered against all forms of industrial slavery and economic wrong, we must also direct our utmost energies to remove all forms of political servitude and party slavery, to the end that the working people may act as a unit at the polls at every election.'

"We have been ever watchful to carry the purposes of that declaration into effect. At times we met with partial success, yet within the past few years claims and promises made in platforms or on the hustings by political parties and politicians, and especially by the present dominant party, have been neither justified nor performed. Little attention has been paid to the enactment of laws prepared by us and presented to Congress for the relief of those wrongs and the attainment of those rights to which labor and the common people are justly entitled and which are essentially necessary for their welfare.

"Several Presidents of the United States have, in their messages to Congress, urged the passage of equitable legislation in behalf of the working people but Congress has been entirely preoccupied after the interests of vast corporations and predatory wealth.

Thought Only of Dollars.

"Congressmen and Senators in their frenzied rush after the almighty dollar have been indifferent or hostile to the rights of man. They have had no time and as little inclination to support the reasonable labor measures, the enactment of which we have urged, and which contained beneficent features for all our people without an obnoxious provision to any one.

"Patience ceased to be a virtue, and on March 21, 1906, the representatives of labor presented a bill of grievance to the President and those responsible for legislation, or the failure or refusal of the party in power to adopt or enforce legislation in the interests of the toiling millions of our country. After setting forth labor's grievances and requests and urging early action, we closed that now famous document with this statement:

"'But if perchance you may not heed us, we shall appeal to the conscience and support of our fellow citizens.'

"The relief asked for has not been granted. Congress has turned a deaf ear to the voices of the masses of our people, and, true to our declaration, we now appeal to the working people, aye, to all the American people unitedly to demonstrate their determination that this republic of ours shall continue to be of, for and by the people, rather than of, for and by the almighty dollar.

Want Good Government.

"The toiling masses of our country are as much, if not more, interested in good government than our fellow citizens in other walks of life. In line with the contention herein stated, the American Federation of Labor made its declaration of political policy as already quoted above. And in line herewith we hope, and have the right to expect, to arouse the citizenship of our common country, interested in good government, to the apathy or hostility of the party in power to the real interests of the people, so that men more honest, faithful and progressive may be elected as the people's representatives.

"Attention is called not only to congressional and legislative indifference and hostility to the interests of labor, but also to the interests of the large mass of all our people. The press for months has been burdened with exposures of the corruption and graft in high circles. The great insurance companies, the trusts, the corporations, the so-called captains of industry, have indeed become the owners of the legislators of our country. Public officials, many of whom have the cry of 'stop thief!' nearest the tip of the tongue, have been elected through these very agencies and the contributions from them.

"If it has come to a condition in this, the greatest and wealthiest nation on earth, that the almighty dollar is to be worshipped to an extent of forgetting principle, conscience, uprightness and justice, the time has arrived for labor and its friends to raise their voices in condemnation of such degeneracy, and invite all reform forces to the people's interests, corruption and graft to political oblivion; to raise the standard of legislation by the election of sincere, progressive and honest men men who, while worshipping money less, will honor conscience, justice and humanity more.

Convention to Make Plans.

"We recommend that central bodies and local unions proceed without delay by the election of delegates to meet in conference, or convention, to formulate plans to further the interest of this movement, and in accordance with the plan herein outlined at the proper time and in the proper manner nominate candidates who will unquestionably stand for the enactment into law of labor and progressive measures.

"The first concern of all should be the positive defeat of those who have been hostile or indifferent to the just demands of labor. A stinging rebuke to them will benefit not only the toilers but the people of the entire country.

"Wherever both parties ignore labor's legislative demands a straight labor candidate should be nominated, so that honest men may have the opportunity in exercising their franchise to vote according to their conscience instead of being compelled either to refrain from voting or to vote for the candidate and the party they must in their innermost souls despise.

"Where a congressman or State legislator has proven himself a true friend to the rights of labor he should be supported and no candidate nominated against him.

No Scramble for Office.

"This movement must not degenerate into a scramble for office. It should be a determined effort, free, absolutely from partisanship of every name and character, to secure the legislation we deem necessary and essential to the welfare and happiness of all our people. As the present objects of this movement are purely in the line of legislation, all efforts should be concentrated upon the election of members of Congress and the various State Legislatures.

"To make this our movement the most effective, the utmost care should be taken to nominate only such union men whose known intelligence, honesty and faithfulness are conspicuous. They should be nominated as straight labor representatives and stand and be supported as such by union men and their friends and sympathizers, irrespective of previous political affiliation.

"Whenever it is apparent that an entirely independent labor candidate cannot be elected, efforts should be made to secure such support by indorsement of candidates by the minority party in the districts and by such other progressive elements as will insure the election of labor representatives.

"All observers agree that the campaign of our fellow workmen of Great Britain has had a wholesome effect on the government, as well as the interests of its wage-earners, and the people generally of that country. In the last British elections 54 trades unionists were elected to Parliament. If the British workmen with their limited franchise accomplished so much by their united action, what may we in the United States not do with universal suffrage.

Committee Is Named.

"In order to systematically carry out the policy and work necessary to this campaign, the executive council of the American Federation of Labor has selected the following members as the labor representation committee: Samuel Gompers, James O'Connell, Frank Morrison.

"Those earnestly engaged in our movement must, we repeat, be guided by the fact that the principles for which we stand must be of primary consideration, and office, secondary. We ask our fellow workers and friends to respond to this call and to make of it a popular uprising of honest men, and to see to it that the best, most conscientious men of labor and their supporters are chosen as their representatives.

"Reports and returns should be made to the headquarters of the labor representation committee (which will be located in the offices of the American Federation of Labor), who will give the best possible information and advice on uniform procedure.

"Whatever vantage ground or improved conditions have come to the workers of our country were not brought to them on silver platters; they are the result of their better organization and their higher intelligence; of sacrifices they have made and the industrial battle scars of many contests. The progress of the toilers has not been due to kindness or consideration at the hands of the powers that be, but achieved in spite of the combined bitter hostility of mendacious greed, corporate corruption, legislative antagonism and judicial usurpation.

Full Rights as Citizens.

"Labor men of America, assert your rights, and in addition to strengthening your faith and loyalty to your organization on the economic field, exercise your full rights of citizenship in the use of your ballot. Elect honest men to Congress and to other halls of legislation, and by so doing you will more completely and fully carry out your obligations as union men, and more than ever merit the respect of your fellow citizens.

"Labor demands a distinctive and larger share in the governmental affairs of our country; it demands justice; it will be satisfied with nothing less.

"Fraternally yours,
"Samuel Gompers, pres.

SEVEN INJURED ON COASTER AT REVERE BEACH

Sailors Rock Cars and Cause Collision on the Musical Railway.

Her right leg and arm broken, her head crushed and her spine fractured as the result of the rear end collision on the Musical Railway at Revere, Miss Katherine Purcell of Somerville is to-day hovering between life and death at the Massachusetts General Hospital, with the chances against her recovery. Six others—four women and two men who were injured have been taken to their homes.

The others who were injured were Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Coughlin of Whalen street, Cambridge; Mr. and Mrs. James Brown of Garfield avenue, Beachmont; Sadie Motherway, 7 Short street court, Charlestown; Mrs. Charlotte Sloan, 45 Worland street, Cambridge.

The accident is said to have been caused by the actions of a party of sailors who were spending shore leave at the beach. According to the story told by the attaches of the coaster, these men jumped up and down in one of the cars of a train, rocking it so that it left the rails. As it was stalled on the runway, another train came along and collided with it. Miss Purcell was knocked to the ground, a distance of fifteen feet, receiving her injuries by striking the supporting timbers of the railway as she fell. The others who were injured were struck by the train which ran into the derailed cars.

When the news of the accident reached Wonderland, several hundred feet away, Major Barroll, the managing director of the company, ordered the Wonderland ambulance to the scene of the trouble. This was the first aid to arrive.

Get Back To High Principles, Says Labor

If it has come to a condition in this, the greatest and wealthiest nation on earth, that the almighty dollar is to be worshipped to an extent of forgetting principle, conscience, uprightness and justice, the time has arrived for labor and its friends to raise their voices in condemnation of such degeneracy, and to invite all reform forces to join with it in relegating indifference to the people's interests, corruption and graft to political oblivion; to raise the standard of legislation by the election of sincere, progressive and honest men who, while worshipping money less, will honor conscience, justice and humanity more.—From political proclamation of the Federation of Labor.

GIBBONS FINDS PUBLIC CONSCIENCE AWAKENED

Cardinal Declares "Respectable" Crime, Formerly Tolerated, Now Brings Vigorous Protest.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Discussing incisively and keenly many of the great questions of the present day, His Eminence Cardinal Gibbons, the head of the Roman Catholic Church in America, at the rectory of the Church of the Sacred Heart of Jesus and Mary, in Southampton, L. I., in a second interview with a reporter for the BOSTON AMERICAN, declares that wealth is a handicap to the young. Last week the cardinal discussed the economic questions of the day.

"It is true that the young man born to great wealth is handicapped in too many instances," said the cardinal. "The corroding power of much money is sorely felt upon the morals of the young.

"It is probable that the temptations which assail the very wealthy young man will be stronger than they might have been under other circumstances where his personal responsibilities were greater. But religious instruction and careful moral training will overcome even the disadvantages of birth. The warnings of example are not lacking.

"It is a fact that I was discouraged a year ago at what seemed to be blunted public sensibilities and the low tone of morals generally, but conditions during the past twelvemonth have vastly improved.

"Publicity," he said, "has brought the secret ills from which we suffered to light and the public conscience has been awakened. The public is alert. The mask of respectability has been torn so often of late from skulking dishonesty that no criminals, no matter how long they may have been immune, can feel quite safe.

"The pendulum always swings back, and the lethargic acceptance of 'respectable' wrong for right has given place to vigorous protest.

"But really," and His Eminence smiled kindly, "I believe conditions which we deprecate have been no worse in this country than in others. They have had better facilities for concealing rascality, and the fierce white searchlight of publicity is not turned on every suspected enterprise so quickly as here.

"There is a tendency to exaggerate in the exposures in this country. Whether or not it is an evil tendency it is hard to decide. So far as insurance is concerned, it has been shown conclusively that the large companies are financially responsible. The few thousands stolen from them are to be regretted, of course, but they do not impair their solvency.

"Many pedestals are vacant after the year's work, but youth must learn the lesson and avoid the rock upon which these men were wrecked."

Discussing Christianity, the cardinal said:

"Love differentiates Christianity from all other religions. In others fear, reverence and obedience might be dominant, but man's love for God and for his neighbor is the basis for the real Christian's life.

"I care more for the little acts of courtesy in everyday life and the little charities which are kept hidden than for the large gifts of millionaires made ostentatiously."

FORGET HEAT IN CHARMS OF WONDERLAND

Delightful Breeze and Many New Attractions Make Big Crowd Happy.

TWINS IN AN INCUBATOR

Although one of the hottest days of the year, crowds sought Wonderland, the radiant electric city by the sea, to forget the discomforts of the baking air and blazing sunshine in the merry round of attractions, which furnished life and motion enough to banish all thought of the heat. New shows, new scenes in the well-liked shows which are familiar to thousands, new features in the great parade and a brand new Arabian colt, the pride of Wild Bill Kennedy's Indian Congress, kept the 40,000 or more people who visited Wonderland yesterday on the move in spite of the heat.

But after all, Wonderland was the coolest spot anywhere near Boston, for all day long a delightful breeze swept over the pleasure ground and, finding its way through the tents, kept the people in some fair degree of comfort.

To-day's Two Features.

Wild Bill Kennedy's Arabian colt and the Syrian twins who are tucked away side by side in one of Dr. Egan's spotless incubators, are the features of Wonderland for to-day and the next few days, until something else novel and new turns up to attract the eye. The colt has been admitted to the parade and proudly follows its mother around the boardwalk, while all the attractions of Wonderland are vieing with each other to make the greatest hit with the crowds.

Kennedy's colt is a direct descendant from "Sultan," one of the magnificent Arabian steeds which the Sultan of Turkey presented to President Grant when he made his tour around the world some 20 or 25 years ago. The great Arab horse passed into the possession of Ringling Brothers' circus and Kennedy's colt is the youngest grandchild of that famous animal.

But the first Syrian twins ever born in Boston have the added honor of being the first twins to be reared in the incubators at Wonderland. The pair weigh but six pounds, twelve ounces. They were born at No. 11 Albany street, last Friday, early in the morning, and by evening of the same day were snugly tucked away in an incubator at Wonderland.

They Would Have Died.

Had this fortune not befallen the tender pair they would have been now beneath the ground, in all probability, as they had begun to droop when they were rushed to the incubator establishment and the care of the experienced corps of nurses. Wonderland will have the distinction of having saved at least three human lives this year, as "Midget" Tesler, the smallest mortal in the world, is daily gaining strength and weight and now tips the scales at two pounds, five ounces.

Dr. Egan, the manager of the incubator establishment and infant life-saving department at Wonderland, has dubbed the Syrian twins of whom he is so proud, "Eleanor" and "Nellie," but it is entirely unlikely that the parents will give the children those names for life, even if they have been making such remarkable progress in the incubator start they are getting with them.

The Syrian colony in Boston is taking the greatest interest in these pretty children, who look just as much alike as do two peas in the same pod. Syrians from all around Boston are flocking to Wonderland to get a peep at the tiny babies who are living so happily and comfortably in the cute little glass houses. The fame of Wonderland has been spread among all the Syrians and the resort has become a regular Mecca for people of that country.

Another daring balloon ascension was made yesterday afternoon at 5:30 o'clock. This time Mrs. Tiny LaRoux, the wife of Professor Joseph LaRoux, and John Maloney, who faced the thunder storm last week and went up into a black electric cloud, made the ascent.

Landed in Lynn Marshes.

At a height of about 4000 feet, Mrs. LaRoux cut loose from the balloon and made a graceful descent, landing in the Lynn marshes. Maloney, who had some trouble in steering his parachute, was floated out for about 400 rods over the ocean before he came down. Then he had to swim to land and drag the great parachute with him. Maloney did not cut loose from the big air ship until he was fully a mile above Wonderland and his drop was so rapid and so far before his parachute caught the wind and opened that many in the great crowd held their breath in sheer fright.

On Wednesday evening of this week, the last day the free tickets to Wonderland which were printed in yesterday's BOSTON SUNDAY AMERICAN are good, Professor LaRoux is planning a four-drop parachute balloon performance. Mrs. LaRoux and Miss Amelia Garcia of South Boston are to go up with the 90-foot balloon and when at a great height will drop with two parachutes, using them one at a time. It will be a spectacle never seen here before.

Professor Fred Ownes, one of the most daring of aeronauts, who is in La Roux's establishment, is expecting this week to repeat his great performance of Saturday, when he made three parachute drops from the balloon, using them in succession.

All of the concessions are doing great business now. The crowds yesterday patronized everything impartially. The great heat drove the people to the friendly shelter of the different tents and halls and most of these were kept unusually cool by perfected appliances for ventilation which secured every breath of air which blew.

To Use Three Parachutes.

Thompson's scenic railway, Fire and Flames, despite its hot name; the Shoot the Chutes, Hell Gate, Love's Journey, Hale's Tours, the Merry-Go-Round, the South Before the War, Japanese Village and the Orient were all packed from morning to night with eager, delighted crowds. Of course, the Wild West was crowded at every performance. It always is.

GO-CART AND OAR SAVE BABY

PORTSMOUTH, R. I., July 23.—By the capsizing of a small skiff, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Anthony, of this town, and their daughter, four years old, were drowned, while their baby, one year old, who was the only other occupant of the boat, was saved, almost by a miracle.

The baby was strapped in a small go-cart, and before the accident happened an oar had been placed, probably by accident, so that it was wedged between the axles and the body of the carriage.

When the boat capsized the baby floated securely in its go-cart, sustained by the oar, and drifted over to the ledge where Prudence lighthouse stands. Lighthouse Keeper Thompson and his wife rescued the child and took care of it. The baby was apparently uninjured.

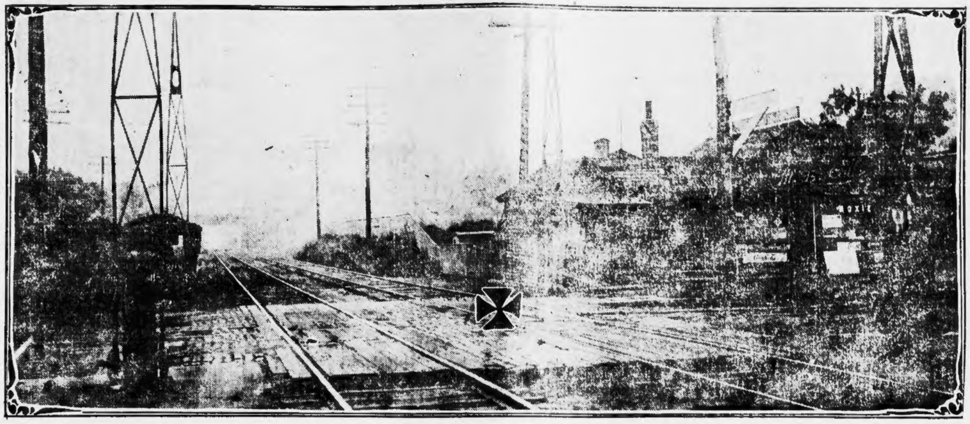
RAILROAD DEATH CROSSING TO REMAIN A MENACE TO THE PUBLIC, AND LYNN CITIZENS ARE AROUSED



Photograph by Boston American Staff Photographer.

CHATHAM STREET RAILROAD CROSSING IN LYNN, WHERE OVER 50 ACCIDENTS HAVE OCCURRED.

Indignant Because Commission Overlooks Chatham Street, Scene of 50 Accidents.

All Lynn is aroused by the report of the commission which for three years has been investigating grade crossings in that city and has recommended that only five be abolished.

Because of alleged inactivity on the part of some of the Lynn city officials they are being scored for not demanding that other crossings should be abolished.

The five that the commission recommends should be abolished are Central square, Washington street, Market street, Pleasant street and Blossom street.

Two of the most notoriously dangerous crossings are ignored in the report. One is at Chatham street on the Boston & Maine main line. The other is Commercial street. At both of these there have been many accidents, most of them fatal.

Issue for the Legislature.

Last Friday Mrs. Joseph Corcoran of No. 129 Brookline street was hurled to death at Chatham street by an express train.

Within a month a boy has been killed at Commercial street.

The report of the commission, which consists of George N. Wiggin, General Edgar R. Champlin of Cambridge and Edward B. Turner of Fitchburg, is to be filed with the clerk of court at Salem some time this week. It has been in preparation since 1903, when the commission was appointed.

Demand has been made that the report shall be made an issue before the Legislature. The Lynn Board of Trade is already considering steps being taken to prevent any of the work being carried out until the Legislature is again in session.

The abolition of the crossings will also be one of the chief issues of the city campaign. Former Mayor Walter L. Ramsdell, who will be the Democratic candidate, will make it part of his platform. He will charge that City Solicitor Starr Parsons has been retained in office after it had been maintained that he was in the employ of the Boston & Northern street railway, and as such could not rightly represent the city at the grade crossing hearings.

Clamor of Disapproval.

The Boston & Northern was assessed 15 per cent of the cost of abolishing such grade crossings as its tracks cross. The Boston & Maine is assessed 65 per cent., the city of Lynn 10 per cent. and the Commonwealth 10 per cent.

Out of the dozen of crossings over which the Boston & Northern tracks pass but three are named by the commission. The car tracks cross the railroad at both Chatham and Commercial streets.

By the report Silsbee street is closed to travel and Shepard street allowed to remain open.

From the first inkling of what the report was to be citizens declare the report has dealt with the interests of a town of 2,500 inhabitants rather than a city of over 80,000 people. The closing of Silsbee street was vigorously opposed when the people were first sounded as to how they would take the report, and later when a more general outline of the report was known the failure to include two such important grade crossings as Chatham and Commercial streets caused a mighty clamor of disapproval.

In the mind of William P. Connery, one of the best known citizens of Lynn, a plot has been revealed in the report of the commissioners to crush the interests of the city of Lynn under the corporate influences affected by the report.

To a BOSTON AMERICAN reporter Mr. Connery said:

Sees Corporate Influence.

"In its present form this report is preposterous and so entirely inadequate to the interests of the people of Lynn that there can be but one logical outcome, namely the death of the report by a monster uprising by the masses of this city and an appeal to the Legislature to kill the report and substitute in its place one which will do away with every grade crossing in this city. The people will not stand for anything short of a complete revisal of the plans and the provision that every grade crossing is done away with.

"The sad death of this poor woman on the Chatham street crossing would seem to have been the hand of divine providence emphasizing the people's protest against the leaving of that much travelled crossing as it is at present.

"The Democratic party of Lynn could have no better slogan for its next campaign than the demand for protection from the corporate interests directly concerned in the grade crossings report and the censure of the present city officials who have allowed such a report to be foisted on the citizens of Lynn.

"You cannot denounce too strongly the methods employed, which have betrayed the interests of the people of Lynn in this report.

Woeful Neglect of City.

Brocton, a city of a little more than half of the population of Lynn, saw to it that in the abolishing of the grade crossings in that city the interests of the city were protected and the New Haven Railroad compelled to do away with every grade crossing within the city's limits. What manner of excuse have our city officials to offer for their woeful neglect of the Lynn's interests in this present report?

"It was my bill, while a member of the Board of Alderman in 1901, which led to the creating of the present commission some three years ago to draw plans for the abolishing of our grade crossings. Yet my bill was meant to provide for the abolishing of every grade crossing in Lynn.

"The commissions in answer to the protest which is accumulating daily now declare that the State has no more money to be applied for this work. If that is the situation we had better wait until the State treasury can give us money for this necessary change. Lynn can well better wait until the proper Legislation can be taken to treat the matter of abolishing grade crossings in Lynn satisfactory to the interests of the city.

"People Will eB Heard."

"I cry shame on the city officials of Lynn who have allowed themselves to fall into the hands of the railroads in defeating the best interests of the city whose paid agents they are. It is to them we can attach the blame for this incomplete report. No more inflamable injustice was ever done our city than the report of the grade crossing commissioners.

"Lynn's only address from this report is an appeal to the Legislature to enact a law which will destroy the present inadequate changes in our grade crossings. The people will be heard, and some of our city officials and particularly our City Solicitor, Starr Parsons, avowedly a paid agent for the Boston & Northern Street Railway, will find that his negligence in safeguarding Lynn's interests in this present report will be registered with a storm of protest at the polls next Fall.

Should Go Under Tracks.

"According to official figures, 7,000 people crossed the tracks of the Boston & Maine Railroad at Commercial street the opening day of the newly completed State highway from Revere to Lynn. Over 100 school children have to pass over the Chatham street crossing daily during school periods. Over both of these crossings the Boston & Northern Street Railway runs its cars. With the acceptance of the commissioners' report in its present form the Boston & Northern Street Railway has been saved a great expense.

"With the rapid growth of our city in that district near Commercial street it is a matter of a few years only before the many streets which now end at the railroad between Commercial and Market streets must be lengthened beyond the railroad. I contend that provision should be made to permit of these streets being cared for later by going under the tracks."

DUMA TO APPEAL TO PEOPLE; FIGHTING

VIBORG, Finland, July 23.—The Duma, 200 of whose members fled here after the dissolution of the body by the Czar Saturday, has drafted an appeal to the people.

The manifesto was prepared at an all night session by a committee of seven, but up to noon to-day had not been promulgated.

ST. PETERSBURG, July 23.—Fighting has already begun in the streets of the capital.

It is expected that when the vast body of peasants throughout the Empire learn that their parliament has been abolished they will rise en masse.

The proletariat and the Group of Toil are preparing for a general uprising of the people.

The Czar has appointed M. Stolypin Premier in place of M. Goremykin.

An imperial manifesto, which is regarded both as threat and an appeal, summons "the faithful sons of holy Russia," the Emperor's millions of mujiks, to join in suppressing the revolution, under promise of land. Many Liberals consider this a direct incitement to the Black Hundreds.

Fighting Has Begun.

At Sadovia crowds with stones had the gendarmes and police on the run when a squadron of Cossacks charged and dispersed them with their whips.

Early to-day there were rumors of heavier fighting at the Narva gate, where the massacre of the followers of Father Gapon took place eighteen months ago. The troops there are said to have fired several volleys, and it is reported there were a number of casualties.

The government is prepared to fight and St. Petersburg is to-day an armed camp, packed with soldiers, artillery and machine guns.

During Saturday night troops were brought in and disposed according to plans previously adopted. These re-enforcements included four infantry regiments of the Chevalier Guard, hussars, mounted grenadiers and a battery of machine guns. The troops occupied the railroad stations and the bridges across the rivers and canals and the patrols of both police and gendarmes were everywhere doubled.

The work of gathering in revolutionary agitators began immediately after the ukase placing St. Petersburg in "a state of extraordinary security" was promulgated, and hundreds of arrests were made before daylight.

The powers conferred upon M. Von Der Launitz, prefect of police, and M. Zinovieff, governor of the province, make them little short of petty dictators. Searches and arrests can be made without process of law, newspapers forced to suspend publication and persons deported by administrative order without trial. Public and private meetings are forbidden. Those arrested may, if it is desired, be tried by military courts and summarily executed.

Two hundred members of Russia's Parliament are gathered at Viborg, Finland, at the Hotel Belvedere, awaiting the arrival of Count Herden, M. Stakovich and other prominent members of the right before opening the session at which will be adopted a manifesto that the people be summoned, and that they stand by the dispersed assembly.

Members of all shades of opinion, especially the constitutional democrats, group of toil and social democrats, are at Viborg, including M. Mouromtseff, president of the house; Prince Peter Dolgoroukoff and Professor Grodesvuel, its vice-presidents, and other officers.

There will be some live going by the Pilgrims this afternoon when they line up with the Indians in the first game, as Ban Johnson will size up the bunch an pick out any flaws that happen to come up.

With the presence of the league's president both teams are likely to hit up the pace a bit, and it's on account of the poor showing of the home team that Johnson is on the scene.

With the Indians it's a case of getting out with the least amount of damage possible, as they are not on hand with their strongest alignment. The injuries to Bradley, Bay, Bemis and Stovall leaves them badly handicapped, and in the distressed conditions of the Naps, the locals ought to boom their own cause.

They have got a group of twirlers who are travelling at a winning clip, and there is nothing the matter with their wings. The catching department has gone to pieces, but with old Malachi Kittredge, the veteran with the mask, they will have a backstop who can handle any kind of delivery.

The management has generously invited the pupils of the Vacation Schools to be guests at the game to-day, and tickets to the number of 5,000 have been distributed, and pasteboards must be presented at the centre field gate to pass the bearer inside.

Captain Collins may get in the game if his injured knee is so far mended as to allow taking a chance. Ban Johnson said that Collins expected to get in Saturday's game if the teams had played, and he must be much improved.

Either Harris or Dinneen will do the twirling, the former was especially effective the last time the Indians were here.

GAMES SCHEDULED TO-DAY.

BOSTON at St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, July 23.—So far the Cardinals have bagged two out of two from the Boston tribe which is as good an average as the other western teams have done since the advent of the Tenney men into the West.

Yesterday Beebe was placed in the box for the Mound City team and two hits only were registered from his delivery. At all times he had the Hub team thinking and guessing and the latter were never correct.

The visiting squad started out correctly and assumed a one-run lead in the second. It was not because they got careless with their score, nor because they were sure that as long as "Young Cy" was in the box for them that the Cardinals couldn't score, but it was because Beebe would send in a curve when the straight ball was expected. To put it very mildly the St. Louis man had them fooled, which can be readily imagined when it is known that he fanned thirteen.

Young was hit freely throughout the game but kept the hits well scattered.

GOTHAM DOPERS EXPECT TWO FLAGS

NEW YORK, July 23.—The Highlanders play the Detroit Tigers at American League Park to-day, to-morrow and Wednesday, after which they depart on their second Western trip, opening with the Cleveland Napoleons on Friday. They will play each of the Western teams four games before returning to the hilltop grounds on August 15.

The Athletics are two games ahead of the Highlanders, and there is no good reason why Griffith's men should fall back any during the next three weeks. They can do as well, if not better, than the Athletics on the road, with an even break in baseball luck.

Chicago's defeat of Brooklyn yesterday carried the Cubs still further away from the Giants in the pennant race. At that there is no reason why the fans should despair of seeing McGraw's men land their third pennant. The Cubs have won sixty-one games and lost twenty-six, while the Giants have won fifty-two and lost thirty, making the Cubs just six games ahead of McGraw's men. In other words, if the Cubs should lose six games while the Giants are winning six, the Champions would have a percentage of .659 to .656 for the Cubs.

Each club has seventy-three games to play. The fact that the Giants wind up the season by playing thirty of these games, including postponements, at the Polo Grounds, is an advantage their supporters do not overlook.

On the other hand, the Cubs virtually wind up their home season on Sunday, September 3. After that they play only one game in Chicago, and play a series each in St. Louis, Boston, New York, Brooklyn, Philadelphia and Pittsburg, winding up the season at St. Louis.

Looking over the schedules, optimistic fans can still pick the Giants and Highlanders out as pennant winners, with a world's series coming between the two local teams.

100 COLLEGE MEN IN BIG LEAGUES

Since the advent of the college graduates into professional baseball, the moral standard of the national game has been increased and the sport to-day is on a higher plane than ever before. A few years ago the announcement of a college baseball player joining the professional ranks was received with a feeling akin to horror by the university bred man, but this has now entirely disappeared, and baseball is looked upon as a commendable profession, where the pay is good and the life suitable to one who enjoys a game requiring a skill developed in the highest degree.

Several college graduates refuse to play Sunday baseball, the most notable example being Roy Thomas, the University of Pennsylvania graduate, member of the Philadelphia Nationals. Dave Fultz, formerly of the New York Americans, was a graduate of Brown University. He refused to play Sunday baseball. Last season was his last on the diamond. He has opened a law office in Wall street. Two college men are managers of experience. They are Garland (Jake) Stahl, of the Washingtons, and Fred Tenney, of Boston. Stahl is an alumnus of the University of Illinois and Tenney of Brown University.

It is a matter of record that nearly every college player who has entered the professional ranks has risen to the top of the baseball ladder, thereby proving that brains, training and associations have been important factors in his successes. It is said that there are nearly 100 college graduates playing ball in the big leagues.

Brown University has given to the game not only Tenney and Fultz, but Lynch of Pittsburg, Pattee of New Jersey and Lauder, formerly with New York and Philadelphia. Christy Mathewson is a graduate of Bucknell. Devlin, also of the world's champions, graduated from Georgetown. Drill, the Detroit catcher; White, the Chicago pitcher; Hart, the Chicago catcher, and Harley, formerly of the Philadelphia Nationals, were turned out by Georgetown.

Davis of Girard College, Dr. Powers of Holy Cross, Henley of Alabama, Plank of Gettysburg and Coakley of Holy Cross are members of the Philadelphia Athletics, and Manager Mack has never had the slightest trouble with any of them since they became members of his team. He is one of the big league managers who is a firm believer in the college graduates as a desirable element, both in and out of actual playing.

In addition to Roy Thomas of Pennsylvania Doolin and Caldwell, also college men, are members of the Philadelphia Nationals. Hugh Jennings of Baltimore, is a Cornell graduate, having taken the law course after he became famous on the diamond. Other graduates well known are Walter Clarkson, New York pitcher, Harvard; Jack Barry of Cincinnati, University of Rochester; Lynch, Pittsburg, Brown; Lundgren, Chicago, University of Illinois; Chase, New York, Columbia. Thielman, Beaumont, Cannell, Overall, Reulbach and Scanlon are also college graduates. This does not include the full list by any means, but it is enough to show that there is plenty of class in the college element in the national game.

Club managers and followers of the game unhesitatingly recognize the contributing influence of the college graduate on baseball, and as long as the professional ranks are recruited from the college nines the standard of the national game will continue to increase both in respect and popularity.

RAIN AT SEABRIGHT.

SEABRIGHT, July 23.—Heavy rains made it impossible to finish the tennis tournament here on Saturday and the games were postponed until August 11.

SNELL BUYS MISS MARY.

William Snell, son of David Snell, former owner of Jupe, 2:07, is collecting a racing and matinee stable. His latest buy is Miss Mary, by Island Wilkes, 2:13¾, that can beat 2:20 on the trot with little handling.

CUSTER GOES MILE IN 2:08¼.

Custer, in the Chamber of Commerce $5,000 stake at Cleveland, has worked a mile in 2:08¾.

TIVERTON IN SHAPE.

Tiverton, 2:04½, has nearly recovered from the effects of the accident at the Readville track that caused the great trotter's lameness. He has been placed in training again by John Howell, who handles the horse, and will be ready for fast work in a few days.

Meeting Tonight at St. Alphonsus

ATHLETES MAY BREAK

Tonight at the St. Alphonsus Association on Smith street, Roxbury, there will be a meeting of the athletes who were suspended by the local registration committee last week for not competing in the Eagles' games at Oak Island after they had entered and appeared on the field.

Although it is thought by many that these men will apply for reinstatement, the sentiment for a new organization is very strong. Furthermore, assurances have been received from the West by some of the prime movers in the scheme that the athletes around Chicago are very much in sympathy with the movement which the Boston contingent has started, and only wait for further developments before some definite action is taken by the Western men.

Speaking about prizes, a well known athlete stated yesterday that he had received poor prizes many times in what was supposed to be a great event. While holder of a world's championship title he says he won a first prize in a set of games held around Boston and received an umbrella. This article was taken home and remained there for some time. One rainy day he decided to use it. The rain descended in torrents, and on arriving at his destination he was surprised to find that the upper part of his light suit had washed off and in the words of the story teller, it was worth about thirty cents.

There is no doubt that the action taken to-night will be a step in the direction of something more valuable than that which the athletes have been in the habit of receiving.

It is understood that the men will apply for a general reinstatement, and if this is denied that the movement for the new organization will at once be started.

WANT RESTRICTED POOL SELLING

It is stated that concerted action is to be taken in New Hampshire by the representatives of the New England Breeders' Club, owners of the new racing track at Salem, and the trotting horse men, in the effort to secure the adoption of a restricted pool selling law in that State next Winter.

Both interests have come to a full realization that there no longer exists a hope of conducting horse racing successfully in the Commonwealth without a measure of that kind, and both have recognized the fact that their cause is common and their interests mutual.

The effort will be made to adopt a law patterned after that in effect in New York State, and, though much opposition is anticipated, it is believed that the magnitude of the interests involved will induce the Legislature to give a favorable consideration to the horsemen's demands.

The purpose to prosecute the object by concerted action is a very good one, certainly promising of better results than if the factions were at cross purposes and seeking to accomplish the same ends by each a method of its own.

In New York State the running and trotting horsemen worked in complete harmony in securing the present law; and each contributed not a little influence to the result. Perhaps the adoption of the law could not have been secured by the apathy and certainly not with the opposition—of either. It was a sensible thing to recognize this fact and to submerge all prejudices in the effort to secure a law of whose provisions they are mutually beneficiaries.—Trotter and Pacer.

BATES HAS MOST HITS

Bates still leads the Boston National team in batting, and he is far ahead of his nearest competitor. Captain Tenney is the second best batsman on the team, and he has only hit for .248 this year, a pretty small average at that. The batting of the Boston National League players has been very poor as a whole, and it is the inability to hit the ball that has kept the South Enders in the last place.

FRANK KRAMER EASILY WINS HALF MILE

VAILSBURG, N. J., July 23.—America's champion cyclist, Frank L. Kramer, won the half-mile open rather easily at the Vailsburg cycle track yesterday. It was his first appearance since his return from a victorious campaign in Europe and he was warmly greeted by the spectators. "Flying Dutchman" Krebs made an earnest effort to defeat Kramer, but lost by more than a length. Accidents to their bicycles put both Kramer and Krebs out of the five-mile handicap which Schlee won from Ruprecht by half a length.

Smith and Spain won the amateur unlimited team pursuit race from Hill and Halgin after a game unpaced race for two miles by Smith. David McKay won the one-mile open from Spain by a good length and the handicap went to Long [illegible].

TENNIS AT LONGWOOD BEGINS THIS MORNING

With nearly all the tennis cracks of the country entered the Eastern championship doubles and the Longwood Cricket Club's sixteenth open singles tennis tournament will begin this morning.

The first and second rounds in the singles will be played this morning, while the drawings for the doubles will not be made until afternoon.

Probably the most interesting match of the day will be between G. C. Seaver and R. D. Little, but the other matches will not lack attendance, for there are other pairings which promise good sport.

It would take a courageous prophet who would make any prediction about the results of the week until the players have been on the courts and shown something of their form in the earlier rounds, but the veriest novice could see that there will be great tennis from the very start, as the entries comprise almost every prominent player in the country. The notable absentees will be Wright, whose hand has not yet allowed him to get into shape again; Ward, who finds it hard to stay longer away from business, and Collins, who has returned to the West.

Of those who will be there, the first and most prominent is Larned, already the winner of two Longwood challenge cups and the present holder of the fourth, which was first competed for last year. He is here to defend his title, and in the Eastern doubles will play with Clothier. Little, the captain of the international team, is on hand, and Dewhurst and Behr, who did so well at Seabright, are also entered.

Besides these, there is a large delegation from New York, including LeRoy, Pell, Torrance, Anderson and Watson, together with Colston of Baltimore, who has been playing a strong game this season, and Jones of Providence, already well known for his play of the last few years. The usual large number of Longwood players will enter and Boston will be well represented. Their play is so well known, however, as to need no comment.

GLIDDEN TOURISTS HAVE TWO DAYS' SIGHT-SEEING IN QUEBEC

BY J. C. KERRISON.

Special to the Boston American.

QUEBEC, July 23.—The participants in the A. A. A. tour spent yesterday in viewing the many noted historic points of interest in this quaint city, which seems to have been transported intact from La Belle France. To those who have never previously visited Quebec it is a revelation and delight. To think of a city of this character, where French is spoken as fluently and as often as is English, being within speaking distance as it were of Boston, is to many of the travellers really remarkable.

There is a distinctly foreign aspect to the city, one which is pleasing to the visitors, especially to those who have visited France and other foreign lands. St. Anne de Beaupre, the Lourdes of Canada, is visited by pilgrims from all points of the world who make their devotions there to supplicate Ste. Anne, the mother of the Blessed Virgin, to intercede for them in their many requests.

Trip Worth Taking.

As many as 6,000 pilgrims are seen there in one day, and the village, composed entirely of spacious cheap boarding houses, is a sight for an American. Not only do the sick, crippled, and paralysis stricken, and the deaf and the dumb visit the shrine to seek for favors, but thousands go there every year seeking spiritual or temporal favors.

The rich as well as the poor flock to Ste. Anne de Beaupre and it is a spectacular sight to see these people, forgetful of their conditions in life, approaching the altar together to receive the Sacrament.

The trip to Ste. Anne's in itself was well worth the taking, and the motorists who went over the roads were delighted with the twenty-one miles of roadway which they traversed. They passed through a beautiful country along the banks of the St. Charles and St. Lawrence, with the Island of Orleans on their right and the high peaked Laurentian mountains on their left. They wended their way through characteristic French Canadian settlements and observed many of the old time houses of French architecture, which were altogether a novelty to them.

A Pleasant Change.

While the Basilica was the chief attraction, the falls of Montmorency, en route to Ste. Anne's, together with the natural steps close at hand, were interesting spots which others of the party visited during the day. These points of attraction and the narrow streets of Quebec itself served to distract one's interest from the stern realities of the tour. It was a pleasant change to gaze on these objects and a good rest to the eyes which for days had been looking at the roadway ten feet ahead.

Those cars not in the Glidden were out and about. The committee in charge of the run held a long session, but nothing of importance was transacted, the main business being carried over until to-day.

This morning there will be a little something moving. Mayor Garneau and members of the city government intend to take the tourists on a trip down the river during the afternoon. A trip to Montmorency Falls and St. Anne's will be made also. In the evening there will be a reception by the Mayor at city hall.

Start Home Tuesday.

Tuesday will mark the start for home, by way of Maine. The first stop there will be at Jackman, about 110 miles from here. The weather has been so good from the start that storms are looked for during the latter part of the trip.

At present there are seventy-two cars here to start on Tuesday. This includes the confetti cars and others of official character. There is a tendency on the part of those who are a few points behind to withdraw from the Glidden contest and join the touring division in order that their cars may not be tied up in towns and so prevent pleasure trips. Thomas Forbes retired his Reo and Robert Alexander with his Pope-Hartford retired to-day. A new move to be made to-morrow is to put on eight checkers.

Word has been received that 150 tourists of the Bay State A. A. will drive out to escort the Glidden tourists to Bretton Woods.

FOOTBALL MEN FROM ENGLAND HERE SEPT. 4

Stronger in point of talent than the Pilgrims, who visited these shores last year, the Corinthians, a famous organization in London, devoted to association football, will make matters more than interesting for devotees of the sport on this side of the water next month and the following. Landing at Montreal about the middle of August, the visitors will play successively at Toronto, Bradford, Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Hamilton, St. Louis, Detroit, Chicago, Philadelphia, Boston and New York.

The games here will be played at the American League Park against an all-Boston team.

In New York they will play two games under the auspices of the New York State Amateur Association Football League, which has fixed September 6 and 8 as the dates. The first game will be played on the grounds of the Staten Island Cricket and Tennis Club at Livingston, S. I., where also the second will, in all likelihood, take place unless a change of plan results in the selection of the Polo Grounds or American League Park, as in the case of the Pilgrims, who drew upward of five thousand spectators.

FAST RIDERS AT REVERE TO-MORROW

The three-cornered bike paced race at the Revere track, postponed from Saturday night, will take place on Tuesday night. The distance is twenty-five miles, and Jimmy Moran will allow Will Stinson of Cambridge and John Bedell of New York two laps start.

Many are of the opinion that Moran is giving the two flyers too much leeway and they will beat him with their advantage. Moran thinks differently, as he considers that he was never in better form.

Stinson especially is going fast, as his trick in the cycle whirl at Wonderland has kept him in the finest condition, and he is sure to make a good performance. Bedell has not been seen behind pace in the Hub, and is considered better than his brother following the motors.

Besides the big paced event there will be a five-mile open and a mile handicap for the professional sprinters.

Menus Bedell, who is one of the New York stars in the sprint game, will have a big array of the local talent to contend with in Young Coffey, Pat Logan, Arthur McDonald, Holbrook, Elmer Collins and a lot of the others.

A. A. U. GAMES DIRECTED BY NEW YORK A. C.

NEW YORK, July 23.—Under the auspices of the New York Athletic Club the junior and senior championships of the Amateur Athletic Union will be held at Travers Island on Saturday, September 8.

Nothing shall prevent an athlete entering in both senior and junior championships and competing in both classes, providing he has not previously won a senior championship.

GAELIC FIELD DAY SPORTS

At a meeting of the committee of arrangements of Gaelic Field Day, in aid of St. Patrick's Catholic Church at Ballyhaunis, County Mayo, Ireland, to be held at Locust Street Grounds Labor Day, the following programme was arranged: Gaelic football and hurling, Irish step dancing, jig, reel and hornpipe; track events, confined to Irish societies; 100-yard dash, 440-yard run, half-mile run, race for girls under twelve, race for boys under twelve, fat man's race (must weigh 220 pounds or over), relay race; also a baseball game between South Boston Catholic Club and a team from Brookline parish. Entries can be made to Peter J. Mahon, 8 Carmel street, Roxbury.

NEW FOOTBALL CLUB STARTS

The newly formed Galway Gaelic Football Club, and adjunct of the County Galway Social Club, held the first practice game at the Circus grounds, Huntington avenue. Captain Jim Mullen has secured material for a first-class team, and expects his men to make a good showing when they clash with some of the other Irish County teams later on in the season.

A match has already been practically arranged for Labor Day at the Father Grealy games at Locust street, the opposing team to be either County Waterford or County Cork, and is sure to bring a record "gate."

LONG WALK FOR $20,000

SAN FRANCISCO, July 23.—Nicholas George, a Greek and a pedestrian, 24 years of age, has arrived here from Australia, en route to Budapest on a walk around the world.

He must on this pedestrian trip walk 30,000 miles in three years and three months, and at the end of that time get a purse of $20,000 from the International Tourist Club of Budapest.

He began his trip at Cairo, Egypt, November 17, 1904. According to his story he walks thirty miles a day and that he has accomplished the different stages is vouched in a diary by "all sorts and conditions of men." Among them were the Duke of Connaught and the Emperor of Abyssinia.

STAHL LEADS TEAM AT BAT

Stahl is wielding the bat the best of any of the Boston American League players at present, and he is quite close to the .300 mark, having .285 for a batting average at present. Ferris is the second best man with the willow, having hit for .265. Grimshaw has not played for some time and, of course, still leads the team in batting. The batting as a whole has been very poor, and five of the players have hit for less than .200 since the season started. Only three men have made home runs, Stahl getting three, Ferris one and Freeman one. The team has not been successful this year in securing extra base hits of any kind.

Tannehill, Hoey and Morgan are the only players that have not fielded for at least .900 since the championship season commenced. The team has been very slow on the bases. Parent leads the team in base stealing with ten bases to his credit. Pretty slow work for a first-class team.

Notes of the Harness Horses

The latest cut is that Lon McDonald will be seen behind Eddie Rice's pacers, John M., 2:02¾, and Sufreet, 2:04½, when they face the starting judge. "Teddy" Dunn has both in the best of shape.

* * *

Millard Drinkwater has added to his Readville stable a four-year-old by Ringen, 2:06¼, out of a mare by Autograph, 2:16½, and another, five-year-old, by Peter the Great, 2:07¼, dam Valence, 2:12. Both are considered very promising.

* * *

Senator George E. Whitney, Enfield, N. H., is having good success with his string of campaigners out under the charge of Ed. Sunderlin. They are taking in the New York circuit. The star of the lot is, of course, the pacing gelding Angus Pointer, 2:04¾, though Billy W., 2:12¼, and Jennie W., 2:11¼, are heading the summaries with regularity.

* * *

"Rough riding" was exemplified in the meeting at Jeffersonville, Pa., according to the stories. It was anything to beat Azzille, the pacing mare prominent to New England horsemen. Her driver was intimidated by the starter, and given the worst of the starts, he was struck twice in the race with the whips of other drivers, and the mare was finally partially disabled by being run into. Except setting one of the competitors back to last position in one of the heats, the guilty parties were allowed to go unpunished.

* * *

Milton Clark, president of the Rochester (N. Y.) Driving Club, so earnestly desires to become an honorary member of the Professional Drivers' Association, that he will pay $50 annually for the privilege, and agree to bar all colored drivers from entering or driving over his track. The latter it is impossible for him to fulfil, as the civil rights bill would intervene to give the colored driver his protection.

* * *

Trainer Jack Wall of Readville has a very high opinion of the trotting mare Princine, 2:15¾, owned by Jack Crabtree. He hit her in New York State with Nancy Nelson, 2:14¾, who is known to have a world of speed, but Jack says Princine could step away from her at any stage of the mile.

* * *

Bert Fowler is rejoicing at the clever way the horses he is training for Horace Chenery at Readville are taking their work. Stiletto, 2:12¾, has been a mile in 2:13¾; Mendolita, 2:18¼, in 2:16; while the three-year-old colt John Ward, by Ringen, 2:06¼, has paced the distance in 2:17¾, well within himself.

* * *

One of the boys at Combination Park claims the track is getting too hard. In the Spring a new surface of couple of inches was spread over the course, but that has now hardened to such an extent that now good harrowing is what is needed.

* * *

W. M. Gordon of Medford owns a promising two-year-old trotting colt by Mariece, the stallion which was recently sold to go to the Provinces, out of a mare by Glencoe Wilkes.

* * *

Ed Geers has shifted Choir Boy, 2:10¾, from trotting to a pace, and he has been a half at his new gait in 1:05.

HOSEY KNOCKS OUT M'GARRY!

NEW YORK, July 23.—On a barge anchored in midstream of the Hudson River off Yonkers yesterday afternoon "Amby" McGarry, an aspirant for lightweight boxing championship honors, went down to defeat before the blows of Willie Hosey after three and a half rounds of fighting. The rival pugilists weight in at 11 o'clock yesterday morning, and each tipped the scales at 133 pounds.

The articles of agreement called for the boys to fight to a finish under Marquis of Queensberry rules for $500 a side and the gate receipts. Before the battle began a count of the gate money showed only $152, although fully 200 men went aboard the barge. The fighters said that the amount was too small in proportion to the number of spectators, and threatened to declare the match off unless the receipts were increased. A collection brought the original sum up to $250. This satisfied the pugilists, and they quickly entered the ring.

Quite a few bets were recorded at even money before the referee, "Jack" Cantwell, called the boys into action. Both fighters appeared to be in excellent condition, and eager for an early finish.

Immediately the bell called them from their corners they rushed to the centre and quickly exchanged hard lefts. During the first three rounds each lad scored hard and often, but the extreme heat and their own efforts to score a quick knockout developed frequent clinches, after spirited rallies. The referee was a bit slow in separating the boys after a clinch and his tardiness annoyed the spectators. McGarry used both hands well, reaching the face and head frequently, but without marking his opponent. On the other hand, Hosey's blows appeared to have much greater force. His left drives to the body made McGarry wince and clinch repeatedly.

Honors, however, were even until about one minute after the bell sounded for the fourth round. Then Hosey planted a terrible right over the heart and a powerful left drive to the solar plexus. McGarry sank to the floor in pain, protesting that he had been foully struck. The referee paid no heed to his claim and started to count him out. After tolling off eight seconds McGarry arose and quickly mixed it with Hosey. While the fighting was most spirited Hosey again landed heavily with the left on the solar plexus, scoring a knockdown. McGarry feebly claimed a foul, which the referee ignored, and as McGarry failed to rise counted him out and declared Hosey the victor.

O'BRIEN WILL FIGHT BERGER 20 ROUNDS

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 23.—Jack O'Brien has accepted the offer from Graney, of San Francisco, to fight a twenty-round or finish fight with Berger. The offer was for sixty per cent of the gate receipts made by telegraph yesterday.

Graney's offer came just before a similar bid for the fight from Coffroth. O'Brien is at his training quarters in South Atlantic City and is keeping in good condition for the possible meet.

"I am ready and willing to take another crack at Berger if he will give me a chance where I can put him out," declared O'Brien to-day, "but he is theatrically engaged at present and I believe he will dodge a battle if he can find a reasonable excuse."

JOE GANS AND HOLLY MEET TO-NIGHT IN BIG BATTLE

There are a few importants scheduled for the week, the best of which will be called to-night at the Occidental A. C., Seattle, Wash., when Joe Gans, the virtual lightweight champion, and Dave Holly, the conqueror of Jack Blackburn, meet. Gans got the lightweight championship by defeating Frank Erne. But the fact that the weight was above the lightweight limit clouds somewhat his claim on the championship. He never lost it. He was not defeated by Jimmy Britt, as will be remembered Joe won on a foul. Of course, the victory was Gans's, although there was not much honor to it. But the championship was defended just the same.

Gans is probably one of the greatest fighters the world has produced, but he is also regarded as a fakir of rank, and in-and-outer besides. Once he was practically beaten by Mike "Twin" Sullivan, and then not long afterward he put it on to Mike impressively, knocking out Mickaleen surely and certainly. Then again later on he put up a very unsatisfactory bout with Willie Lewis in New York.

Holly a Fast Man.

Holly has fought here, and there can be no question of his speed and ability. His victory over Blackburn was sufficient to give him standing. Blackburn prior to that went up and down the country challenging everybody and chasing Gans in particular.

It looks like a hard bout, but despite the fact that Gans is getting old he ought to win. Gans right and ready to win is really the only man in the world anywhere near Joe Walcott's weight who is really the Black Demon's master. The contest should produce a winner, as it is booked for twenty rounds. The promoters expect a big house and the prices are fairly high.

Another long fight is that scheduled for Friday night near Cincinnati, when Freddy Welsh, the clever Englishman, and Hock Keyes will meet. They had a six-round bout in Philadelphia some time ago and Welsh made a big hit by his good showing. Keyes is clever and will not be caught napping. Welsh's victory over Erne has made him stand good.

BOXING BOUTS FOR THE WEEK

MONDAY.

Joe Gans vs. Dave Holly at Seattle, Wash.; Kid Pantz vs. Jimmy Murray, Jimmy Gardner vs. Peter Sullivan, at Providence; Fred Cooley vs. Tony Caponi at Wyandotte.

TUESDAY.

Johnny Crowe vs. Louie Long at Everett, Wash.; Rudolph Unholz vs. Arthur Cote at Sanford, Me.

THURSDAY.

Kid McFadden vs. John Core at Seattle, Wash.; Mike Schreck vs. Tommy Burns at Terra Haute, Ind.

FRIDAY.

Hock Keyes vs. Freddy Welsh at Cincinnati; Tommy Murphy vs. Bert Keyes at Philadelphia; Kid McDonald vs. Kid Dell at Augusta, Me.

Unholz and Cote.

Unholz, the South African, who had a tough fight at Old Orchard beach the other night, has another hard contract to fill tomorrow night when he meets Arthur Cote at Sanford, Me. Unholz has a decision over Cote, but the latter claimed he was out of condition at the time of the fight. This time, however, Cote will be in good shape, as he has been training hard, and is anxious to turn the tables on Unholz. It will be a tough battle.

Tommy Murphy is looked for July 27 also. He is to fight at Jack McQuigan's National A. C., Philadelphia, if a suitable opponent can be "dug up." Murphy is a hot favorite in the Quaker town despite the fact that owing to a bad attack of malaria Spike Robson gave him a terrible grueling. Robson and Murphy were booked for a return engagement, but Spike hurt his shoulder and the bout was necessarily postponed. If possible that Robson can get into good condition he will get the chance against Tommy. If not it will be Bert Keyes.

Jimmy Gardner, whose bout with Willie Lewis fell through, will hook up with Peter Sullivan near Providence to-night. Jimmy was very disappointed when the match with Lewis was declared off, as he felt he would beat the inflated New Yorker. Gardner claims that a victory over Lewis would entitle him to a chance against Honey Mellody. Gardner is so clever that he should beat Sullivan. The latter is a good man, if one goes by his record, and yet he was far from impressive in his boxing against Adam Ryan at Chelsea.

English Fighter Here.

Johnny Summers, the best 126-pound boxer in England, arrived in this country yesterday. He came here at the solicitation of Jim Clark, who met him when the boat arrived and who will look after his interests while in this country. Summers is a well built fellow, and has the looks of a good fighter, which he undoubtedly is. He has been in the game for six years, and among those he has beaten are Cockney Cohen, Jim Driscoll, who recently beat champion Joey Bowker; Young Josephs, Jack Roberts, Bill King and Spike Robson, who is now in Philadelphia.

Summers was greatly surprised to learn when he landed that Spike Robson claimed to be the lightweight champion of England.

"Why, I beat him in 20 rounds at the National Sporting Club just before he sailed for America," said Summers. "Nevertheless," he continued, "Robson is a good fighter, and nothing will please me more than to meet him in this country."

TIVERTON IS ALL RIGHT TO WORK OUT NOW

Tiverton, 2:04½, has fully recovered from his lameness, is the report from Island Park, Albany, and John Howell will soon commence giving him sharp work, with a view of getting him into condition to start at the Buffalo Grand Circuit meeting.

The day of the match race at Readville, when he was withdrawn on account of lameness, and Sweet Marie and Wentworth fought out the race, a local blacksmith made a careful examination of Tiverton.

He claimed that he saw good reasons for the gelding having gone lame in his hind ankle. In shoeing him one side of the hoof had been left considerably higher than the opposite side.

This, in his opinion, put all of the strain on the cords of the leg and ankle, in such a way when at speed as to cause inflammation and soreness, which in the end resulted in his going wrong. Shod in the way he was, no horse in the world could stand training.

Of course, when entirely let up, the soreness would leave the parts, but just as soon as active training began again the old trouble would soon be in evidence. The blacksmith concluded that if Tiverton were to have the hind foot perfectly leveled there would be no further bother with his going lame.

O'BRIEN CAN'T LOSE IN PHILADELPHIA

BY TAD.

Philadelphia papers are still wondering why it was that New York writers declared Sam Berger a winner over Jack O'Brien, while they (the Quaker pen men) saw O'Brien win handily.

That is quite funny, when you come to think of it.

What a chance an outside has to beat Jack O'Brien in Phil!

To hear of O'Brien losing over there would be about as surprising as a shipwreck in the subway. There never was a time when Jack wasn't a winner over there, no matter how badly he was beaten. If ever there was a loyal town it's Phil. Too bad Rockefeller didn't come from there they'd say he was the squarest thing that ever pulled on a pair of socks.

O'Brien has pulled off some awful deals in his career, and as one sport said last night, "He's so crooked that he can hide bhind a corkscrew." Still in Philadelphia Johns record is as pure as "Queen Lily Soap," and he's the personification of honesty.

Berger, without any question, beat O'Brien to a standstill. He outboxed, outpunched and outgeneraled the Quaker.

The New York writers said this, and it was exactly what happened.

There was not a round of the six that belonged to O'Brien and he hugged in the last to save himself from being walloped. I'm not making it strong a bit when I say that Berger beat him to a standstill. He did, and O'Brien's features would prove it if you could have seen them. He was, as David Harum says, "Done up so brown that in places he was burnt."

Philadelphia papers the next morning said: "O'Brien wins handily." Others said: "Berger sticks limit with O'Brien, but is outpointed." Still another says that O'Brien could have put him out at any time, and that he was merely fooling with Sam.

The home paper usually does stand by its' native son. After the Jeffries-Munroe fight the Butte Banner said: "Jim Jeffries knocked out Jack Munroe with a lucky punch last night. Munroe was leading by three lengths before the finish came."

After the McGovern-Palmer battle the London Gazette said: "Pedlar Palmer lost in one round to Terry McGovern yesterday. McGovern hit our boy when he wasn't looking."

After the McCoy-Placke fight, the Holland Eagle said: "Herr Placke lost his fight with Kid McCoy through over-confidence. He had McCoy on the ropes, but while stopping to expectorate upon his upholstered mitt, was hit on the head with a bottle. The referee said it was a fair." Fitzsimmons had O'Brien groggy and almost out near the close of their six-round battle over there, and then the piollce suddenly jumped in, saving "Jawn" from the lacing and keeping his "Lost" column clear.

John Willie stuck a right into O'Brien front a foot in their fight at Philadelphia, but there was a yell, and the blow was called foul. O'Brien was picked up from the floor and given a long rest. He fought the rest of the battle in good style. The papers there said he won hands down. Can you beat it?

One more kick, please.

Mr. Berger, who recently out-boxed O'Brien, announces that he will rest up two or three months before fighting again. It was a terrible strain for him to fight a six-round battle. He needs the time to recuperate, poor, weak little fellow. There are a few gentelmen—namely, Kaufmann, Ruhlin and Johnson, who are really anxious to meet Mr. Berger, but they will have to wait until Sam gets rested.

Berger is like the ball player who gets to first base and is afraid to try for another base for fear that he will lose the bag he is on.

Outboxing O'Brien in a limited bout is nothing wonderful, Samuel, old kid. Kick in with a few more, and let's see whether you are a comer or not.

RIFLE SHOOT BEGINS TO-DAY

The second annual meet of the New England Military Rifle Association begins to-day at the Bay State Rifle Range, Wakefield. The match lasts throughout the week, and is second only to the national match at Sea Girt, N. J., next month.

The New England interstate match will be shot on Thursday and Friday, and will be the principal event of the week.

Over 150 tents have been set up, giving the range the appearance of a miniature regimental camp ground, and the various teams from Maine, New Hampshire, Massachusetts and Connecticut have nearly all arrived.

YANGER IS HARD AT WORK

CEDAR LAKE, Ind., July 23.—Benny Yanger and his manager, Jack Curley, and trainers, Fred O'Neill and the two Dave Barrys, are now quartered at Brown's resort here. The spot is ideal for a training camp, and if Yanger fails to reach the best shape it will not be through lack of training and strict adherence to training habits and diet.

The little Italian arrived yesterday afternoon, and soon the resort was hustle and bustle to prepare for strenuous work of getting into condition to meet Kid Herman. A ring platform, twenty by twenty-four feet, was built in the open air where Yanger will go through his boxing stunts. Punching bag, wrestling mat, pulleys and all apparatus is in the open air to the great delight of Barry, who is a strong believer in open air.

Yanger said: "From the very first I got stuck on this spot, and so much fresh air is bound to benefit me. With Chicago Dave to give me cleverness and Frisco Dave to stand wallops, I will surely be in good shape." Brown's resort is open for visitors, and Yanger and Curley expect big crowds from Chicago.

MAUD KESWICK WORKS A MILE IN FAST TIME OF 2:08

CLEVELAND, July 23.—The Canadian pacer, Maud Keswick, 2:03¾, with Vance Nuckols up, worked a mile in 2:08 at Glenville track, and when she went to the half in 1:06¾ in her next heat everyone thought a mile in about 2:10 would be the result. But Nuckols was noticed to be moving up with her, and soon she was going so fast that she seemed to be only hitting the high spots, the mile being paced in 2:06¾, which made the final half in the sensational time of 1:00.

"Doc" Tanner furnished an interesting trio of stunts with the champion trotting gelding, Major Delmar, 1:59¾; the trotter, George G., 2:05¼, and the pacer Morning Star, 2:04¾. The Major was full of trot, repeating miles in 2:07, 2:10½ and 2:08. In the mile in 2:10½ the great trotter seemingly loafed to the half mile pole, but from there on he gave as great an exhibition of trotting as was ever seen, a number of good watches getting the last half in fifty-nine seconds, a burst of speed probably never equalled excepting by Lou Dillon.

Morning Star and George G. took their work in company, Tanner being up behind the trotter. In their first fast mile E. S. Burke, Jr., had the mount behind Morning Star, George G. finishing in front in 2:07¼. The next mile H. K. Devereux drove the pacer, this heat being in 2:07, last half in 1:01¾, and George G. again seeming to have it on the pacer. Burke remarked after his ride that Morning Star was as easily driven as an automobile, and seemed to go just as smooth and about as fast as one.

One of the greatest performances of the year was a mile in 2:08¾ by E. I. Leighton's gray matinee trotter, Nanco, by Alcryon, 2:15. George Sanders held the reins over the gelding, while George Marshall kept him company with Aerolite, 2:09¼. The mile was trotted in 2:08¾, with the final quarter in 31 seconds. This is about as classy a green trotter as there is in the country and acts like a genuine [illegible] He has won every race at this season's matinees in which he contested.

[illegible] Carry, the popular California reinsman, was not to be surpassed in point of speed and when he let loose of Brilliant Girl, his M. & M. entry, a heat in 2:11½ and another a shade under 2:10 resulted.

Ed and John Benyon worked half a dozen head of their Kentucky Grand Circuit candidates,—the Chamber of Commerce pacer, Rey del Valle, by Rey Direct, 2:10, going a mile in 2:10¼, the green sidewheeler, Cassius, being timed one in 2:10. Exton, 2:30½, also stepped a mile in 2:12 on the trot, while several others showed that they were rapidly getting keyed up.

Jim Hogan began working the fast trotter, Snyder McGregor, 2:05¼, late in the forenoon, going several heats around 2:10.

Another horse that attracted lots of attention was the California pacer, Bonnie Steinway, also entered in the Chamber of Commerce Stake. She was asked to step along and showed a mile in 2:10, last half in 1:02½.

The fast green mare, Madge Wildfire, that trotted a trial mile in 2:08½ over the Lexington track during the workouts in the morning of the first week of the meeting for Trainer George Saunders, after which the Smyser Brothers, who owned the fast four-year-old, sold her for a long price to David Shaw of Pittsburg, met with a mishap in her work here and turned up lame, which necessitated her being declared out of the $10,000 M. and M. race, which is to be decided the first day of the Cleveland meeting. Madge Wildfire had worked in 2:11¼.

BOSTON YACHTS DISBAND.

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, Me., July 23.—The yachts of Boston, Portland and Kennebec Yacht clubs, which have been at Five Islands for four days, disbanded yesterday. Some of the yachts will go to Bar Harbor, while the others will return to their home ports. It was expected that the yachts would be disbanded Saturday but the thick fog which prevailed kept them in the harbor.

OARSMEN MEET AUGUST 12.

The annual meeting of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen will be held at the Lakeside boathouse, Worcester, on Friday, August 10.

Entries for the national regatta close Saturday, July 28, with Fred R. Fortmeyer, P. O. Box 740, New York.

EASTERN LEAGUE.

At Montreal—Montreal, 6; Baltimore, 2.

At Newark—First game, Rochester, 3; Newark, 2. Second game, Rochester, 1; Newark, 0.

HAL CHASE THE 1906 SURPRISE

The race for base hits has narrowed down to a three-cornered affair between Larry Lajoie, Hal Chase and George Stone, with the Cleveland and Yankee holding the honor with 106, while the Brown leg is one hit behind.

Hal Chase is the surprise of the season with the stick. Coming to the American League last year from the coast, considered a first-class fielder, but only a fair batter, he is proving as much of a sensation as Stone did in 1905. He has proved himself one of the greatest hitters of the year. At the start of the season he did not appear promising with the stick, but since the first of May he has been coming to the front with a rapidity that is making the older players think of their laurels. It is something remarkable to see two such young players as Stone and Chase break into fast company and give the champion Lajoie a tussle for the honors.

Not a Heavy Hitter.

Chase is not what one would call a heavy hitter. He just chops the ball over the heads of the infielders, or beats out bunts. He is fast on the bases, and can beat out many a hit that would be a sure out for some other batter. At the start, the Californian was considered a lucky hitter by pitchers, but a man cannot be lucky all season and be tied with the champion with the number of base hits. Chase is a batter, and will always be a dangerous factor for the next ten years or more with anything like luck. Just past the age limit, the Pacific Coast wonder appears to have a long life on the diamond and will be a fitting man to carry the crown of Lajoie when the latter decides to quit the game. This is certain. Lajoie will always be considered the premier batter, for he is a natural hitter, and has shown his ability ever since joining fast company to be on top. That is why Lajoie is being picked to carry off the batting championship for 1906.

JOE CASE SIGNS.

Joe Casey of Wakefield, now playing with the New Manchester, Conn., team, will join the Newark team in the Eastern League next season.

Casey is only eighteen years of age, and has already made a great reputation in Massachusetts and Connecticut.

He first began to attract attention when he played with the strong Wakefield High team in 1903. He then played with the Father Mathews of Peabody and with the Wakefields. This is his second season with New Manchester.

Casey refused an offer to join the New England League. He is well known throughout New England.

BILLY SEAL A 4-YEAR-OLD.

Billy Seal, one of the winners in "Long Shot" Cox's string this season, is a four-year-old that last year won three out of five races in Nebraska, taking a record of 2:19¼. He is by Gentry's Treasure, 2:10, son of John R. Gentry, 2:00½.

ED C MAKES FAST TIME AT GROSSE POINT

DETROIT, July 23.—The fastest training mile of the year at Grosse Pointe was paced by Ed C., 2:07¼, formerly in the stable of W. O. Foote but which Frank Cares of Detroit will campaign down the big ring this year. Without seeming to take a deep breath, Ed C. whirled Cares to the half in 1:05, and then came home in a burst, finishing the second part of the journey in 1:03, the mile in 2:08 flat.

As the track was fully two seconds slow and the mile was by no means up to the top of the hoppled fellow's ability, the railbirds at the big track under the poplars are unanimous in the opinion that Ed C. is right up to a mile in 2:05 if pushed.

This fellow is going to start at Windsor, and will go right down the line. He has been conditioned down in his Texas home this Winter, and is hard as nails right now and carrying but a little superfluous fat. That he will win from those 2:08 pacers when he gets ready seems a certainty.

Another sensational performance was achieved by the Flint pacer Harry B., 2:11½, trained by Mr. Thorsby, who had him last year. This fellow has not yet been strung out for a complete mile, but flew home from the half in 1:02¾, and looks ready to clean up all the 2:12 pacers. He is a free-gaited pacer, and needs no hopples.

AUTUMN FASHIONS CHECK SUMMER RIOT IN COLORS

Fashion Dictates Quieter Shades and Tints

AUTUMN colors and fabrics are already known to the elect, and hints of things liable to be in favor then are not without value to the women who will wear the results of all the careful study and preparatory work by professionals of experts in the sartorial world.

Paris is still the creative center and liable to hold her place there in spite of all that her would-be rivals may say. Paris creations modified to suit American demands are the ideal, and in the shaping of fashions after they are made American authorities do valuable service, but few are the modes really born here.

After the riot of color that has prevailed the Autumn color card looks rather dull—plums, seagull grays, seaweed greens, bronzes and smokes, wood browns, indigo blues.

These are some of the staple tints, while in lighter tones there are beiges, pearl and dove grays, light blues the color of a jay's wing with a grayish cast, hydrangea, turquoise and porcelaines.

Others are cayenne pepper red and Bordeaux, purples with a good deal of red in them, the dahlia colorings, light browns, tans and fawns, Empire pinks and a very deep old rose, and soft yellows for contrasts and garnitures.

Stripes are already pushing checks aside with the elect in France, and the Pekin—black and white—makes some of the smartest costumes, especially for matrons who like a certain dignity.

Voiles with line effects, and heavier serge and other wool weaves show this tendency toward stripes. Combinations of silk and velvet and velvet and wool in the same weave are a noticeable feature of Fall goods.

Look Out for the Man Who Says He Understands Women

WOMAN will always remain to mankind an interesting problem—so much so, that the woman who is at the trouble of explaining herself, who accounts for the "why" of this mood of hers and the "wherefore" of the other action, has lost her chief charm, and is regarded as a weariness; for man is like a boy who never tires of taking a piece of delicate machinery to pieces.

Just so; it is the delightful inconsequence of woman that man loves. Were she like himself, a creature of routine and monotony, he might be able to follow her vagaries better, but he would not follow them with half the zest.

Women waste their breath in sighing that their husbands and lovers do not understand them, instead of which they should be uttering a silent thanksgiving for such a state of affairs, since they may be sure then that they are in the hands of a really good fellow.

Beware of Geniuses!

BALZAC is, probably, the only man who ever understood a woman's heart. Take only one incident in his book "Modest Mignon." The heroine, Mignon, has fallen in love with a stranger whom she meets at church. Occasionally when she dares to look up from her devotions, it is to find the eyes of the stranger fixed admiringly upon her.

At last, after many such silent meetings, she feels unable to bear the suspense longer, and prays for a sign from heaven that she may know whether she is beloved.

With true feminine inconsistency, she fixes the sign herself. It is that when she next looks up the stranger's eyes may meet her own, and sure enough, when she next raises her eyes it is to find his burning gaze upon her, and Mignon goes home satisfied that the seal of heaven is upon her choice.

Yet, however they may understand women in the abstract, the fact remains that geniuses, as the wife of a celebrated man remarked, are "gey ill to live with."

An Emphatic Reply

THE man who understands his wife or sweetheart is one to be distrusted by her.

There is no harm in his trying to understand other women. He is entitled to analyze them with all the unfeeling coolness of a detective. But his faith in his chosen life-partner should be such that he does not want to inquire too closely into the whys and wherefores of her words and actions.

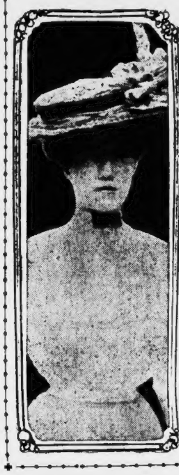
His love is not of the right kind if he is willing to turn the searchlight, so to speak, upon her feminine foibles, for the unselfish lover is only too anxious to hide from himself any peculiarity in his fair enslaver which might prove to be distasteful to him.

Thus it happens that the man who has the best chance to understand a woman obstinately refuses to do so, and the loveless fellow who would like to understand a woman never gets an opportunity to study her at sufficiently close range. Do men understand women? No!

BRANDY SNAPS

RUB a quarter of a pound of butter into half a pound of flour, add half a pound of moist sugar and half an ounce of ground ginger, make all into a paste with a little molasses. Spread the paste thinly on tins and bake. When cooked, cut into strips and roll round the fingers. When quite cold, put the snaps into tins to preserve their crispness.

WHOSE PHOTO IS THIS? YOU WIN IF IT'S YOURS



THERE'S no denying it. These pictures of women shoppers are immensely popular. BOSTON AMERICAN readers are looking for them these days.

Perhaps it's the uncertainty of it that lends its fascination. No woman in the metropolitan district who ever goes shopping can tell the day when her picture may appear on this page.

And interest is not confined to the strictly down town shopping section. The other day when the camera man visited the neighborhood of Timothy Smith's store out in Roxbury he was immediately recognized just as he is in the heart of the city.

Miss E. F. Stratton of the Victoria Hotel, Malden, considered herself in luck when her picture appeared Thursday on this page. The camera man caught her as she stepped out of Siegel's.

"This prize comes in handy," said Miss Stratton when she received the award, "I am just going on my vacation."

The identification process is easy. All the original has to do is to appear. She will be recognized and rewarded immediately.

Right and Wrong Way to Brush Teeth

WITHOUT good teeth there cannot be perfect mastication. Without thorough mastication there cannot be perfect digestion, and, consequently, poor health results. Hence the paramount importance of sound teeth. Clean teeth do not decay.

The teeth should not be brushed from side to side. If this is done the points of the gums will be injured and the teeth loosened.

The upper teeth should be brushed from the top downwards (from the gums to the ends of the teeth), the lower teeth from the bottom upward, also from the gums to the extremity of the teeth.

It is essential to wash the teeth at night, and wise to wash them also in the morning. Rinse the mouth after each meal.

HOW TO BRUSH THE HAIR

THERE is a right and a wrong way of brushing the hair, as there is of doing everything else. First, part down the centre above the forehead and give it twenty brisk strokes on either side.

Divide it down the back and repeat the same process. Next brush it back form the ears, giving it always the twenty strokes. Perserve with this treatment, and your hair will soon become soft and glossy and repay the trouble taken with it.

If Meat Does Not Taste Good Try Some of These Dainty Dishes

PEOPLE do not think it possible that health and strength can be obtained without eating largely of meat and animal food. In this they are quite mistaken, and especially now, and in the hot-weather months there is no danger in reduction of the amount of meat eaten.

Many persons do not like to commence food reform for fear their health will suffer. It is possible that a sudden departure from their ordinary course of life may cause momentary inconvenience, but no ill results will be lasting, and the change should be made gradually.

The best way to begin is to remember that flesh food of any kind contains nothing of value which may not be easily obtained from the vegetable kingdom.

Such tasty things as mushrooms on toast, potatoes, pieces of bread dipped in eggs and fried, onions either boiled or fried, Welsh rarebit and many such things are easily made inexpensive and very nutritious.

Here are a few recipes, and in using them you insure yourself a healthy and delicious diet.

BANANA DESERT

SOAK a cupful of tapioca over night; next morning add to it one quart of water. Put in a double boiler and cook till transparent.

When done, add half a cup of sugar and four sliced bananas. This makes a delicious dish for luncheon.

FRUIT SOUP

BOIL one pint of apples cut and cored, but not peeled, and one pound of plums (when stoned) together for an hour. Then add two tablespoons of whole meal rubbed to a cream with one gill of milk.

When the fruit is thoroughly pulped rub it through a sieve, return to the saucepan and put in slowly two tablespoofuls of fine sago, stirring till it swells. If made with pears and raisins, take one pound of stewing pears and one-quarter pound of pudding raisins or loose muscatels. Prepare in the same way and serve a few whole raisins in the soup besides.

VEGETABLE OYSTER SOUP

SOAK the roots of vegetable oysters in cold water for two hours, scrape all the skin from the oyster plant, then cover it with cold water.

Slice very thin under water, and to keep it from discoloring take a pint of it and a pint of water and boil very slowly till tender; add a pint of boiling milk and a cup of cream; thicken with a bit of flour paste.

Boil till thickened and serve hot.

DATE SANDWICH

SPREAD slices of thin graham bread with nut butter, and then with chopped dates, seedless raisins or figs.

Nuts may also be added if desired.

STUFFED EGGS

CUT six hard-boiled eggs in two. Take out the yolks and mash them fine. Add two teaspoonfuls of butter, one of cream, two or three drops of onion juice, and salt and pepper to taste. Mix all thoroughly. Fill the eggs from the mixture and put them together. There will be a little filling left, to which add a well-beaten egg. Cover the other eggs with the last preparation and roll in cracker crumbs. Fry in boiling lard till a light brown.

SCOTCH EGGS

ONE cupful of cooked lean ham chopped very fine, one-third of a cupful of stale bread crumbs, one-third of a cupful of milk, half a teaspoonful of mixed mustard, cayenne enough to cover a silver five-cent piece, one raw egg and six hard-boiled.

Cook the bread and milk together until a smooth paste. Add to the ham and add the seasoning and raw egg. Mix thoroughly. Break the shells from the hard-boiled eggs and cover with this mixture. Put in a frying basket and plunge into boiling fat for two minutes. These are nice for lunch, tea or picnics.

WHEAT MEAL CRISPS

MAKE a stiff dough of Graham flour and cold water, knead thoroughly, roll very thin and bake from ten to twenty minutes in a hot oven.

Plants That Thrive Well on Verandas

THE love of the beautiful is one of God's attributes. It is a part of human nature. If you live in the country it presupposes that you love flowers. But city people also love posies, and many houses, both in the city and country, have verandas.

You should use them. With the help of nature you can make them beautiful, cool, green and shady.

Vines will transform any porch into a bower. To have vigorous vines plenty of rich soil is needed, and it is best to insure this by adding plenty of cow manure or bone meal to make it rich. Good drainage, as in any flower garden, is also essential.

In the woods many wild vines may be found. There are the Dutchman's pipe, the wild grape, the moonseed vine, the trumpet vine and others. The wild grapevine is especially useful and easily obtained.

Its luxuriant foliage, rapid growth and delightful fragrance make it useful for Summer houses and similar structures.

The trumpet vine, with scarlet-orange flowers, is easily grown, not at all sensitive to rough treatment.

It is found in many parts of the country wild. These vines may all be obtained from dealers.

The silk vine is fine, with dark green, luxuriant foliage of neat habit. It belongs to the milkweed family of plants, and derives its name from the silky contents of its seed pods.

It is excellent for the veranda, and is used to cover many famous old ruins.

ADVICE TO THE LOVELORN

By Beatrice Fairfax

GET THE JOB FIRST

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I am engaged to a young lady twenty years of age. She has lots of trouble at home; she is worried a lot over it. Now, what do you think I should do? The two of us are out of work and I have enough money saved to furnish her with a kitchen and bedroom outfit. I have a job, starting in Monday.

Now, would you if you were me, work a while and then get married or get married now and buy what I want later on?

J. W. B.

GET your job first and after you have made a success of it and saved a little money get married. It is too bad that your sweetheart is unhappy at home, but if she can be patient a while longer it would be much better than marrying in haste with no visible means of support.

A FOOLISH GIRL

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

I have been going with a young girl for the past four months. During that time I learned to love her and know that my love is reciprocated. Every time I go to visit this girl I find that a friend of mine is also there, and during my presence she is very affectionate toward him. I am not of a jealous disposition, but as I love this girl dearly I would like to have her show a little more consideration for me. Shall I speak to her about it?

E. C. G.

THE girl is behaving very foolishly and shows very bad taste. If you care for her, speak to her about it. Tell her how badly it looks and urge her to give up such unladylike behavior. If she cares for you she will pay attention to what you say.

CHAPTER LXXIV.—Continued.

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

HE wanted to help Armadale. In one short afternoon he had quite changed his opinion about the man. Degraded with drink as he might be, this broken-down artist had, nevertheless, shown himself a man of unexpected chivalrous impulses, of delicacy of feeling.

Armadale was desperately hard up; if he had been of Delamere's stamp with the information he was possessed of, he would have gone forthwith to the police to claim the reward offered for Olga's apprehension, or traded on Herries's secret.

He had done neither; he had come to ask Herries to reassure the girl he had inadvertently frightened, to tell her she had nothing to fear from him. Such a man was worth saving from himself, and Herries meant to save him if he could.

Delamere had gone away from the Court in a very humbled spirit, after vainly attempting to borrow two dollars from the men he had tried to blackmail. Herries felt a sense of intense relief. Delamere might have proved a constant source of danger, not only to him, but to Olga, whose whereabouts might have been traced through his movements.

Herries wondered if his story were true; that he had lost the plundered diamond. He was powerless to prosecute the thief, of course, but at least that affair in Maiden lane gave him a hold over Delamere.

An Art Commission

"You are the sort of man who, disappointed of blackmail, might try to revenge yourself by anonymously informing the police," he had said to Delamere. "That you could injure me in that way I admit—but only at your own expense. Because instantly you would be denounced to the police.

"Armadale would have no difficulty in convincing them of your share in the robbery of the Mirror of the Moon, and your subsequent attempt to blackmail me."

Under the circumstances he felt that he had little to fear from Freddy Delamere.

"Armadale," he said, as a thought suddenly struck him, "I am going to offer you a commission to paint a lady's portrait. And to paint it, you'll have to stay here at the Court."

Armadale should paint Rosamund's portrait. If he could get the artist keen and enthusiastic about the work, he thought, here would be one safeguard against temptations. Rosamund should give him a sitting each day.

He had gained an insight that afternoon into Armadale's character; he still retained a chivalrous reverence for women, and self-respect enough even yet to make him shrink from letting such a woman as Rosamund see him in one of his drunken outbursts, Herries felt sure.

He and Rosamund would enter into a conspiracy to save this man in spite of himself.

"I'd like to accept, Herries," said Armadale, looking rather wistfully across the wide park of lawn enclosed by masses of scented color and old, old trees. "I should like to stay here. My rooms look out on a back yard where nothing thrives—except lobster cans. But I'm afraid of myself. Don't think I don't appreciate your kindness. I appreciate it very much—only, however hard I struggled, sooner or later I should break out, and—you say it is the portrait of a lady?"

"Yes; a girl with dark hair and big eyes," said Herries, "a face whose sweetness would be an inspiration to you to make you impatient to get it on canvas; the girl," he added softly, "who has promised to be my wife. You will do this as a favor to me, Armadale?"

A Necklace Clue

"If only I could be sure of myself," said the other, irresolutely. "But I know my weakness, and I still have a sense of shame left, odd as it may seem. I shouldn't like such a girl to see that worse—that usual side of me."

"She wouldn't. When will you come?" said Herries quickly. He saw the man was wavering, half-persuaded. He and Rosamund—Rosamund, whose gentle influence unconsciously exerted would be far stronger than any influence of his—would have this man yet. "To-morrow?"

For a moment Armadale did not speak. Then he cried suddenly:

"Yes, I'll accept your commission, Herries. I haven't great hopes myself, but—but it's so long since any one took an interest in me or my welfare at all that I feel I'd like to show my appreciation of your kindness. You're a good fellow, Herries.

"At least I shall have a strong incentive to—to keep my hand and nerves steady; I should like to do something better than mere backwork again—though I'm afraid I've almost forgotten how—and something you and she will think better than mere backwork. Herries, I wish you happiness with all my heart."

"Thank you, I think I should be the happiest man on earth but for that unsolved mystery that throws its shadow and its threat over the future."

"If only we could find out who that woman was who flitted past me in the dark on the stairs!" said Armadale. "By the way, that was a curious things about Zingara's necklace——"

"What was curious?"

"That necklace of imitation diamonds found in Miss Vail's flat. Part of it was injured; the setting was crushed and broken in one place, and some of the stones gone, as though someone, in a fit of anger, had ground it underfoot. There might be a clew in that."

A Possible Solution

"What clue does it suggest to you?" cried Herries, eagerly.

"Only this; that perhaps the murderer believed the stones to be genuine and committed the crime to obtain possession of them. They were a good imitation, you know—not too big, either—and would have deceived any but an expert, and perhaps an expert would have needed to examine them closely——"

"Yes, they were a good imitation. I remember buying them; an unexpected windfall had come to me, and I thought they would please poor Zingara. I gave a good deal for them."

"So good an imitation that I know many imagined them to be real."

"The necklace was taken, I am convinced, by that woman I saw leaving your room; but the police found some of the stones ground to powder on the floor of the room, where Zingara was found. What if the murderer took them, believing them to be real, and after committing a desperate crime to obtain them discovered that they were merely shams, and in a fit of rage savagely stamped a foot on them?"

"Yet, if so, why should the person have taken the necklace away?" said Herries.

"Unless with the intention of fixing the crime on an innocent person?" suggested Armadale.

CHAPTER LXXV.

Armadale Meets Olga

ARMADALE was persuaded to stay to dinner, and in the cool of the evening Herries walked with him to the station.

The artist had definitely promised to come to-morrow on a visit to Herries Court to undertake a painting of Rosamund.

"I wonder if Miss Wynter will say I ought to have consulted her before making these arrangements on her behalf?" Herries laughed, knowing quite well how eagerly Rosamund would throw herself into his scheme—as they walked to the station through the pleasant elm-shaded lane in preference to the dusty high road.

They walked briskly, for after dinner the two men had lingered smoking among the trees, leaving themselves only sufficient time to catch the train.

"Five minutes yet," Herries said, looking at his watch, "and the station is only a couple of hundred yards away."

"We might be a mile away from anywhere; these streets are so quiet and deserted."

As Armadale spoke the curve in the street brought them suddenly face to face with a third person—the last person Herries could have wished to meet just then, "Miss Wynne."

It was too late to avoid a meeting, and Herries's momentary feeling of dismay left him almost immediately as he reflected that since Armadale was coming to the Court he must inevitably encounter "Miss Wynne" sooner or later; and this meeting would be a test whether Olga's disguise was effectual. If Armadale did not recognize her he might safely assume that no one would. Even if he penetrated it the man was to be trusted.

An Explanation

Olga had not reasoned so reassuringly. At the sight of Armadale a little involuntary cry of fear had broken from her.

What was this man doing here with John Herries, this figure out of his past and hers? Then she saw a significant glance of reassurance in Herries's face, as he stopped.

"How are you, Miss Wynne?" he said. He added in a slower voice, as Armadale walked slowly on for a few steps, "I'm afraid seeing Armadale startled you. It startled me when he came unexpectedly this afternoon. But I've altered my opinion completely; I quite misjudged the man.

"He's a good sort of chap, and even if he had penetrated your disguise, which I am sure he has not done, he would respect your secret."

"Yes, he startled me for the moment; it was foolish for me to betray it by crying out," she said. "But it was like a bit of my past life walking up to meet me.

"I don't think he recognized me; these glasses alter me so, don't they?—horrid things that I felt inclined half a dozen times a day to put my foot on!"

Armadale seemed curiously excited. As Herries came up to him he cried:

"Herries, it has just flashed on me who the woman was who passed me on the stairs that night. I told you she cried out as she heard me; her cry was brought back to me just now by that lady's in some strange fashion."

Herries looked at him, startled.

"It suddenly flashed upon me why the cry of that woman that night seemed familiar—why, I can't explain. Only it was Freda Vail who stole the murdered woman's jewels, who crept out of that flat that night!"

In his excitement Armadale had raised his voice; it was carried on the still night air to the ears of the woman walking slowly in the other direction.

"THE JUNGLE"

20,000 BLACKS TO BREAK STRIKE

Copyright, 1906, by Upton Sinclair. All rights reserved. Published by courtesy of Doubleday, Page & Co.

THEN there were yells and hoots, continuing until at last the Superintendent came to the door. "We all go back or none of us do!" cried a hundred voices. And the other shook his fist at them and shouted, "You went out of here like cattle and like cattle you'll come back!"

Then suddenly the big butcher president leaped upon a pile of stones and yelled: "It's off, boys. We'll all of us quit again!"

And so the cattle butchers declared a new strike on the spot, and gathering their members from the other plants, where the same trick had been played, they marched down Packers' avenue, which was thronged with a dense mass of workers, cheering wildly.

Men who had already got to work on the killing beds dropped their tools and joined them. Some galloped here and there on horseback shouting the tidings, and within half an hour the whole of Packingtown was on strike again and beside itself with fury.

Huddled Like Swine

Meantime the packers had set themselves definitely to the task of making a new labor force. A thousand or two of strike-breakers were brought in every night, and distributed among the various plants.

Some of them were experienced workers—butchers, salesmen, and managers from the packers' branch stores, and a few union men who had deserted from other cities; but the vast majority were "green" negroes from the cotton districts of the far South, and they were herded into the packing-plants like sheep.

There was a law forbidding the use of buildings as lodging-houses unless they were licensed for the purpose, and provided with proper windows, stairways, and fire-escapes; but here, in a "paint-room," reached only by an inclosed "chute," a room without a single window and only one door, a hundred men were crowded upon mattresses on the floor.

Up on the third story of the "hog-house" of Jones's was a store-room, without a window, into which they crowded 700 men, sleeping upon the bare springs of cots, and with a second shift to use them by day.

The ancestors of these black people had been savages in Africa; and since then they had been chattel slaves, or had been held down by a community ruled by the traditions of slavery.

Now for the first time they were free—free to gratify every passion, free to wreck themselves.

They were wanted to break a strike, and when it was broken they would be shipped away and their masters would never see them again; and so whiskey and women were brought in by the carload and sold to them, and hell was let loose in the yards.

Reign of Terror

Every night there were stabbings and shootings; it was said that the packers had blank permits, which enabled them to ship dead bodies from the city without troubling the authorities. They lodged men and women on the same floor; and with the night there began a saturnalia of debauchery—scenes such as never before had been witnessed in America.

And as the women were the dregs from the brothels of Chicago, and the men were for the most part ignorant country negroes, the nameless diseases of vice were soon rife; and this where food was being handled which was sent out to every corner of the civilized world.

The "Union Stockyards" were never a pleasant place; but now they were not only a collection of slaughter-houses, but also the camping-place of an army of fifteen or twenty thousand human beasts.

Such were the stockyards during the strike, while the unions watched in sullen despair and the country clamored like a greedy child for its food, and the packers went grimly on their way.

Each day they added new workers, and could be more stern with the old ones—could put them on piece work and dismiss them if they did not keep up the pace.

Jurgis was now one of their agents in this process, and he could feel the change day by day, like the slow starting up of a huge machine.

He had gotten used to being a master of men, and because of the stifling heat and the stench, and the fact that he was a "scab" and knew it and despised himself, he was drinking and developed a villainous temper, and he stormed and cursed and raged at his men and drove them until they were ready to drop with exhaustion.

Open Rioting

Then one day, late in August, a superintendent ran into the place and shouted to Jurgis and his gang to drop their work and come.

They followed him outside to where, in the midst of a dense throng, they saw several two-horse trucks waiting and three patrol wagon loads of police.

Jurgis and his men sprang upon one of the trucks, and the driver yelled to the crowd, and they went thundering away at a gallop. Some steers had just escaped from the yards, and the strikers had got hold of them, and there would be the chance of a scrap!

Those on the flying truck yelled a warning, and the crowd scattered pell-mell, disclosing one of the steers lying in its blood. There were a good many cattle butchers about just then, with nothing much to do, and hungry children at home, and so someone had knocked out the steer, and as a first-class man can kill and dress one in a couple of minutes, there were a good many steaks and roasts already missing. This called for punishment, of course, and the police proceeded to administer it by leaping from the truck and cracking at every head they saw.

There were yells of rage and pain, and the terrified people fled into houses and stores, or scattered helter-skelter down the street. Jurgis and his gang joined in the sport, every man singling out his victim, and striving to bring him to bay and punch him.

If he fled into a house his pursuer would smash in the flimsy door and follow him up the stairs, hitting every one who came within reach, and finally dragging his squealing quarry from under a bed or a pile of old clothes in a closet.

Jurgis and two policemen chased some men into a bar-room. One of them took shelter behind the bar, where a policeman cornered him and proceeded to whack him over the back and shoulders, until he lay down and gave a chance at his head.

The others leaped a fence in the rear, balking the second policeman, who was fat; and as he came back, furious and cursing, a big Polish woman, the owner of the saloon, rushed in screaming, and received a poke in the stomach that doubled her up on the floor.

Meantime Jurgis, who was of a practical temper, was helping himself at the bar; and the first policeman, who had laid out his man, joined him, handing out several more bottles, and filling his pockets besides, and then, as he started to leave, cleaning off all the balance with a sweep of his din of the glass crashing to the floor the fat Polish woman to her feet but another policeman came up behind her and put his knee upon her back and his hands over her eyes—and then called to his companion, who went back and broke open the cash drawer and filled his pockets with the contents.

Then the three went outside, and the man who was holding the woman gave her a shove and dashed out himself.

The gang having already got the carcass on to the truck, the party set out at a trot, followed by screams and curses and a shower of bricks and stones from unseen enemies.

These bricks and stones would figure in the accounts of the "riot" which would be sent out to a few thousand newspapers within an hour or two, but the episode of the cash drawer would never be mentioned again save only in the heart-breaking legends of Packingtown.

It was late in the afternoon when they got back, and they dressed out the remainder of the steer and a couple of others that had been killed and then knocked off for the day.

Jurgis went downtown to supper with three friends who had been on the other trucks, and they exchanged reminiscences on the way.

As he was going to the place where he slept he met a painted-cheeked woman in a greasy "kimono," and she put her arm about his waist to steady him; they turned into a dark room they were passing—but scarcely had they taken two steps before suddenly a door swung open and a man entered, carrying a lantern.

"Who's there?" he called sharply. And Jurgis started to mutter some reply; but at the same instant the man raised his light, which flashed in his face, so that it was possible to recognize him.

Jurgis stood stricken dumb and his heart gave a leap like a mad thing.

Meets an Enemy

The man was Connor!

Connor, the boss of the loading gang! The man who had seduced his wife—who had sent him to prison and wrecked his home and ruined his life! He stood there, staring, with the light shining full upon him.

Jurgis had often thought of Connor since coming back to Packingtown, but it had been as of something far off, that no longer concerned him.

Now, however, when he saw him, alive and in the flesh, the same thing happened to him that had happened before—a flood of rage boiled up in him, a blind frenzy seized him.

And he flung himself at the man and smote him between the eyes—and then, as he fell, seized him by the throat and began to pound his head upon the stones.

The woman began screaming, and people came rushing in. The lantern had been upset and extinguished, and it was so dark they could not see a thing; but they could hear Jurgis panting, and hear the thumping of his victim's skull, and they rushed there and tried to pull him off.

Precisely as before Jurgis came away with a piece of his enemy's flesh between his teeth; and, as before, he went on fighting with those who had interfered with him, until a policeman had come and beaten him into insensibility.

To Be Continued Tomorrow.

HEARST'S BOSTON AMERICAN
WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST
80 AND 82 SUMMER ST., BOSTON, JULY 23, 1906

A Pathetic Whine From a "Scab"

Where Does This Man Suppose His Good Wages Come From?

A daily newspaper prints a whine which is signed "Robert White." This gentleman—perhaps imaginary—deplores the existence and the influence of labor unions. And he concludes as follows:

"I am an American mechanic, but God help me if I have to join a labor union in order to provide for myself and family. ROBERT WHITE."

Mr. Robert White, what kind of a mechanic are you? Your letter suggests a man more efficient as a whining talker than as a worker.

Let us assume that you ARE a mechanic.

Is it such a disgraceful thing to join a union that adds to the strength and self-respect of all those that join it?

Perhaps you know that when the union which makes up the United States was formed there were some that talked as you did.

Some of the original States were inclined to say, "God help us if we have to join a union."

But they DID join the union. Wasn't it a good thing? Haven't they all profited by it? Aren't they better off, more powerful, more self-respecting?

And, Mr. Robert White, are you aware of the fact that American wages are high—at least four times as great, on the average, as they were less than a hundred years ago?

If you are a bricklayer, or a carpenter, getting four or five dollars a day, DO YOU KNOW WHY YOU GET THAT MUCH MONEY?

You get that BECAUSE OF THE PLUCKY FIGHT THAT UNION MEN HAVE MADE.

The TRADE-UNIONS give YOU your big wages. It isn't the scabs that give you your good pay. If this country's mechanics consisted entirely of scabs, of whining men who want all the benefit and none of the risk, you, Mr. Robert White, would be getting a dollar a day; you would be discharged without notice; you would be despised by your employer, AND YOU WOULD DESERVE TO BE DESPISED, for you would have shown yourself a man without self-respect, ambition or courage.

Ignorance is probably at the bottom of your complaining. You probably don't know the work that unions have done for you and every other man who depends upon his daily labor for his daily bread.

The good wages that are paid to-day to the union man, and also to the scab, are paid BECAUSE UNION WORKINGMEN'S WIVES HAVE SUFFERED—WATCHED THEIR CHILDREN GO HUNGRY WHILE THEIR MEN FOUGHT FOR THEIR UNION RIGHTS.

Self-sacrifice, courage, the spirit of manly friendship that should exist between all workers, are at the bottom of the American mechanic's prosperity.

The scab who wants the big wages, but who would shirk the union dues, and run away like a deserter in war-time when the strike comes on, is not a man to criticise union labor. He may be weak and unfortunate. He is not admirable!

You should take pride in joining a union, Mr. White; you should be proud to contribute your share to the united action of workers. You should have within you that sense of loyalty, solidarity, respect for your class and for your work that makes the real trade-union man.

The trade-unions are far from perfect. But perfection is not common among human beings.

The trade-unions make mistakes—they are too dictatorial sometimes in power. Who is NOT dictatorial when powerful?

But the trade-unions represent in industry exactly what our union of States represents in politics and in national life.

The trade-unions represent determination of men to stick to one another, to work with one another, suffer with one another when necessary, AND PROSPER WITH ONE ANOTHER ALL ALIKE.

Mr. Robert White, God help the man who has within him so little sympathy with his fellows that he does not gladly join them and work with them, sharing prosperity and hard times, putting the welfare of ALL against the selfish wants of the self-seeking ONE.

Very pathetic in the life of a professional "scab" workman is his belief in the flattery of those that use him. He helps to keep down wages. He betrays his own kind. And mean employers who use one workman to fight another are fulsome in their praise of the scab's character. The poor ignorant man who has gone against his fellow workmen finds comfort in the praise of the rich men that praise him AND DESPISE HIM.

The scab flattered by a rich enemy of unions ought to know the kind of reception that a traitor gets in the enemy's camp. The scab is received by the employer, fighting unions, as enthusiastically as the British received Benedict Arnold. And in his heart the employer despises the scab whom he uses just as the general despises the soldier who sells out his country.

Workmen, STICK TOGETHER. What do you get out of life, except a mere living and YOUR HONOR AS MEN? Is not self-respect worth more to you than the money of a man that looks down upon you as you take it? You have climbed well up the hill together, arm in arm.

STICK TOGETHER, AND YOU WILL REACH THE TOP.

Divide, and you will roll to the bottom.

Landing the Fish

By Wex Jones

JACK SPOTTE was a nice fellow, and he had barrels of money; at least his father had. Tom King was a nice fellow, too, and he had barrels of money or his father had.

Ethel thought a lot of each of them, and she was as nice as she could be to both, but somehow or other neither Jack nor Tom would come to the point where one discussed the residential merits of Jersey or Long Island.

The Summer was slipping by without the sign of a proposal, and Ethel began to grow unhappy. So one evening she wrote two letters—short letters, but full of meaning. One ran:

"Dear Tom—I promised to give you my reply to-night. I am sorry to hurt you—but, Tom, I love another. I may as well tell you it's that adorable, athletic boy you've seen me with several times, Jack Spotte. I shall always endeavor to be a true sister to you. ETHEL."

Then Ethel wrote another letter, worded just the same, except that it began "Dear Jack," and referred to Tom King as the adorable athlete. Then she took the letters out to the postoffice, carelessly getting Tom's letter into the envelope addressed to Jack, and Jack's letter, of course, into Tom King's envelope.

Next morning Jack Spotte opened his mail.

"That chick King proposed to Ethel!" he cried. "And she loves me! There may be time."

Tom King opened his letter:

"That scrub of a two-Spotte!" he cried. "Proposed to Ethel, indeed! And she loves me! There may be time."

Ethel had just accepted the panting Jack Spotte when Tom King burst breathlessly into the room.

"Too late," she murmured sweetly.

"And to think, dear," said Jack, after Tom had gone "to the devil," as he had bitterly announced his destination, "to think that I might never have won you if that letter hadn't got into the wrong envelope."

"Just think of it, dear," answered Ethel. "Wasn't it just luck?"

And over his shoulder she winked at herself in the glass.

The Creed to Be

By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1906, by American-Journal-Examiner

OUR thoughts are moulding unmade spheres,
And, like a blessing or a curse,
They thunder down the formless years
And ring throughout the universe.

We build our futures by the shape
Of our desires, and not by acts;
There is no pathway of escape—
No priest-made creeds can alter facts.

Salvation is not begged nor bought;
Too long this selfish hope sufficed;
Too long man reeked with lawless thought
And leaned upon a tortured Christ.

Like shrivelled leaves, these wornout creeds
Are dropping from Religion's tree;
The world begins to know its needs,
And souls are crying to be free.

Free from the load of fear and grief
Man fashioned in an ignorant age;
Free from the ache of unbelief
He fled to in rebellious rage.

No church can bind him to the things
That fed the first crude souls evolved;
For mounting up on daring wings,
He questions mysteries all unsolved.

Above the chant of priests, above
The blatant voice of braying doubt,
He hears the still small voice of Love,
Which sends its simple message out.

And clearer, sweeter, day by day,
Its mandate echoes from the skies:
"Go, roll the stone of self away,
And let the Christ within thee rise."

A Hot Weather Hint

Eat Less Meat

IF you are suffering from the heat these days, and want to do something to make yourself more comfortable, try to get along with a little less to eat.

A great many people habitually eat too much. They do not realize it until they check themselves and notice the difference after a few days of alimentary moderation. Then they wish they had been temperate sooner.

In the hot weather, especially, it is well both from the standpoint of health and of comfort to eat sparingly and carefully.

Make a beginning by eating less meat. Unless you are engaged in manual work of an arduous kind you do not require much meat in such days as these. In cold weather, when the frequent enrichment of the blood current is necessary to give the body needed warmth, extra fuel is called for. And meat is an excellent fuel.

But in the heated season you will be cooler and healthier, and therefore happier, if you eat but little meat. Doctors, scientists and the wiser of your friends will tell you so.

You do not need to go entirely without flesh or fowl because Senators Spooner and La Follette are vegetarians, or because the Chicago packers put shoe leather into "boneless ham" or make "potted chicken" of corn mea and pin-feathers. But for your own comfort's sake try a diet in which heat-producing foods constitute the minor part. If you have been in the habit of eating meat three times a day, limit it to a single meal. Eat fresh vegetables and fruit instead. And whe the mercury is hovering about the 9 mark get along with a bowl of crackers and cold milk.

You may not be able to enjoy cool breath of the sea or the ref ing breezes of the mountains, you are the average person you make your life more endurable in th big city by more thoughtful attention to your daily bill of fare.

EAT MORE SPARINGLY.
EAT LESS MEAT.
